FOOTPRINTS APPEAR IN VAN AKEN CASE

William Dibble Saw Three of Them and Testifies For the Defense—Trial Enlivened by Sharp Passage Between Court and Counsel.

Edwin Van Aken's defense to the charge of murdering his wife was begun before Judge Jenkins and a jury in county court this morning. The testimony developed the fact that Van Aken had opened an account at the Rondout Savings Bank on September 1, 1910, by depositing $3,000 jointly in his own name and that of his wife. The fact that the deposit had been made at that time, and the amounts of subsequent withdrawals was established by the prosecution, the bank book showing that six days before the murder he had withdrawn $600.

Other testimony offered on behalf of the defense was that Mrs. Van Aken had been in her yard the morning of the murder but Mrs. Elizabeth Vincent, the neighbor who saw her, was unable to tell whether it was before or after ten o'clock. Mrs. Vincent spent the morning in her yard except for half an hour when she went to her daughter's house. She was away from the house at 12:10 or 12:15 o'clock.

Testimony was also given by William Dibble that on the afternoon of the murder, after officers had arrived, he had seen three footprints larger and more distinct than those made by his own feet, two of the footprints being in the Van Aken yard and one in Mrs. Vincent's yard. The nearest distance of any of the three footprints to the fence dividing the properties was ten feet. The prints were indistinct but he knew they were made by rubbers or rubber-soled shoes because he could see the dots made by the rubbers, which were at last two inches longer than his own shoes. Dibble wears a No. 8.

The morning also was enlivened by a passage between Judge Jenkins and Mr. Brinnier, when the latter accused Judge Jenkins of smiling and the latter threatened to fine him for contempt of court, adding that there was a limit to all things.

Van Aken Drew $600 Six Days Before Murder.

L. L. Osterhoudt, secretary of the Rondout Savings Bank, was the first witness of the morning. He knew Carrie B. Van Aken during her lifetime and knew Edwin Van Aken, her husband. The bank book of the Rondout Savings Bank showing an account with Carrie B. Van Aken or Edwin Van Aken was introduced in evidence.

The bank book showed the following deposits and withdrawals.

On October 16, 1914, it was Edwin Van Aken who appeared at the bank and withdrew $600.

The People Rest.

With this testimony The People rested.

Mr. Brinnier moved to strike out the testimony given by Dr. Shultze and Dr. Chandler, which was denied. He moved that the court direct Van Aken's acquittal on the grounds that no motive had been shown. That the evidence was insufficient to justify submission to the jury of the question of Van Aken's guilt or innocence, and that there was not sufficient evidence in any way suggesting or connecting him with guilt. The motion was denied.

Mr. Brinnier's Opening Address.

Mr. Brinnier then addressed the jury. He said in part:

"The district attorney has said there was a tragedy here. Yes, there is a tragedy, which is the indictment and persecution of this defendant before this court and jury. He said he would prove the guilt of Edwin Van Aken.

"Where is the guilt of Edwin Van Aken? That man stands, as the court will charge you, innocent of any crime until he has been proved guilty. Not one of you can put a finger on any evidence so far that Eddie Van Aken committed this crime. You can't guess he committed this crime; you can't think he committed it; there must be conclusive evidence that he did, before this man's life can be taken.

"You will hear the evidence of witnesses for the defense, and then instead of being convicted, Eddie Van Aken will be absolved even of the imputation with which the district attorney charges him. I'm not going to take up much of your time with evidence for the defense or with discussion about it. I will leave the discussion to the district attorney; the more he talks, the poorer case he has, and no man can do more talking than William D. Cunningham.

Of Course, Van Aken Drinks.

"What motive could he have had for this crime? They say Eddie Van Aken drank a little. Of course, he did drink a little. I don't approve of drinking myself. They say he got drunk a little, and I don't approve of that either, but do any of the neighbors say he was ugly to his wife? And they ought to know.

"The only one who says he was cross to his wife is his sister-in-law, and you know sisters-in-law can make trouble. She had that $168 that belonged to her sister in mind. That was all the estate her sister owned, but through the generosity of Eddie Van Aken, her husband, she had the right to draw money from the bank. Was it for this money? We will show you that Eddie Van Aken was worth between $10,000 and $12,000.

"What! Murder his wife? From what motive?

"But we will call another sister who will tell you what their relations were.

Nobody an Angel.

"Now that I think of it, there was another witness, Mrs. Elting, who saw her crying one day. I don't know if you jurors are all angels, but if there's one of you who hasn't had an altercation with his wife, he's an angel, and I say that to anyone, to you jurors, to the district attorney or to the court. That's human nature. And if you went through this earth without a word that would make them cry sometimes, it would be very strange.

"And those tears might have been for some other reason. Suppose he had had a word with her and was a bit cross?

"There was $168 belonging to her estate. That's all she had of her own, and her sister is interested in that. She was at the house three or four weeks. If Eddie Van Aken was so bad why did she stay there? But when she went away she was driven to the railroad station by this bad man in his own carriage. They slept together that night after she had been crying. If there had been any bitter feeling, would they have slept together?

Better Men Have Been Drunk.

"I guess Eddie Van Aken did drink a little and he spent some money, but he had a right to do it; it was his own money. I don't approve of such things, but it was his own money.

"He did drink a little, he got drunk a little, but he's just as good a man for that as you or I, or Mr. Cunningham or Mr. Traver or Judge Jenkins. Better men than we are have got drunk. But that didn't make a criminal; that wouldn't make him murder his wife.

"You will hear our evidence, and at the close of the evidence I hope you will acquit him so that he can go back to that home you saw yesterday, lonesome though it may be, a free man.

"I've never been interested in a case more than this one. I've known Eddie Van Aken as a good citizen and as a good man, and to convict him on such evidence as has been given here would be an outrage.

"Unfortunately his drinking gives a chance to reflect on him, but remember that drinking such as he did doesn't make a murderer."

Dead Woman's Sister First Witness for Defense.

The first witness called by the defense was Mrs. Lizzie Hommel of Port Ewen. She has always lived there and is a sister of Mrs. Van Aken. The Van Akens had no children. She had three brothers and four sisters, all of whom are living.

Mrs. Hommel some weeks was at the Van Aken house two or three times; in other weeks not at all.

Q.—"Did you ever hear any controversies between Edwin and his wife while you were there?"

A.—"I did not."

Q.—"Van Aken would be there?"

A.—"At times."

Q.—"Did you ever hear him say a cross word to your sister?"

A.—"I did not."

Mrs. Hommel was a witness before the coroner.

Q.—"Were you asked this question: 'Their domestic relations were always pleasant so far as you know?'"

Objected to and sustained.

Q.—"And was your answer: 'So far as I know they were perfectly happy.'"

Objected to and sustained.

Q.—"So far as you knew were their relations always happy?"

A.—"So far as I know at the time."

Q.—"Did your sister ever complain to you that Eddie Van Aken had quarreled with her or had any trouble with her of any kind?"

An objection by District Attorney Cunningham was followed by several minutes of oratory, during which Mr. Brinnier kept asking the stenographer to "get everything in the record."

Calls Murder "Unfortunate Occurrence."

Q.—"Were you at the house the day after this unfortunate occurrence?"

A.—"I was."

The witness was there also for several days when strange men were around the house. She called the others' attention to one particular man who was looking sharp in the window. As the man went away he was shaking his hand. Eddie Van Aken was out there.

Q—Did your sister ever tell you a strange man had come there and she was frightened?"

Objected to and sustained.

Q—"What did she say about a strange man coming there before this unfortunate circumstance and about her being scared?"

Objected to and sustained.

Before the coroner, Mrs. Hommell testified her sister had told her a strange man had come to the front door, that she was scared and locked the back door; that she was afraid but did not know why.

Mrs. Hommell Found Bag of Money Next Day.

On the day after the murder Mrs. Hommell found a leather bag containing money. It was hanging on a hook under some clothing which were covered by a curtain. The roll of money in the bag didn't look very large and she didn't know how much it contained. The bag also contained a white handkerchief. The discovery was made when she went to the place to hang up a skirt.

Kingston Painter Appears in Case.

Q—"Do you know a painter named Buckley, who used to live in Saugerties?"

District Attorney Cunningham—"Stand up, Mr. Buckley."

Mr. Brinnier objected to Mr. Cunningham's telling anyone to stand up.

"The remark was trivial," said Judge Jenkins. "I suppose you both want to get at the facts."

Mr. Brinnier took exception to the remark of the court.

Cross-examination:

Q—"Do you recognize this photograph as that of the man who was at the Van Aken house?"

A.—"I could not say; I only saw him through the curtain. I don't believe I could recognize him again."

Two other photographs shown to the witness failed of identification by Mrs. Hommel, who said it was "Not in my eye as I saw him."

"Arise, Mr. Buckley," said District Attorney Cunningham.

Mr. Buckley came forward.

Q.—"Do you recognize Charley Buckley of Foxhall avenue, this city, as the man who stopped at the Van Aken house?"

A.—"I couldn't say."

Mrs. Hommel said the bag containing the money which she had found was not hidden in the room except as it was covered by clothing.

Asked if she had heard a conversation between Mrs. Scott and her sister, Mrs. Van Aken, in the Van Aken house, she replied, "Not in the Van Aken house."

Q.—"Did you hear a conversation anywhere?"

A.—"I didn't hear all the conversation."

Q.—"Did you hear your sister, Mrs. Scott, and your sister, Mrs. Van Aken, talking together?"

A.—"Yes."

Van Aken Counted the Money.

The money she found she turned over to Edwin Van Aken, who told her afterward it amounted to eighty-odd dollars.

Q.—"Do you recollect having seen the defendant come home to his wife in an intoxicated condition?"

A.—"I never saw him come home to this house."

Q.—"Were you there at night frequently?"

A.—"Sometimes once or twice a month in summer."

Mrs. Hommel was asked whether before the grand jury she swore she had seen Edwin Van Aken driving home frequently so drunk he could hardly sit up in the wagon.

An argument as to the materiality of this testimony led District Attorney Cunningham to say this was a phase of the treatment of the defendant toward his wife. This witness was produced by the defendant and in the legal sense was a hostile witness. Under the law he was entitled to examine her as to her statements before the grand jury.

Sister Declares She Is Not Hostile.

"I protest against the statement that this is a hostile witness," said Mr. Brinnier. "You are not hostile, are you?"

"No, sir," said Mrs. Hommel.

When District Attorney Cunningham later withdrew a question before it was answered, Mr. Brinnier said he objected to Judge Jenkins announcing that the district attorney had withdrawn a question and then looking at the district attorney, who thereupon withdrew the question.

Mrs. Hommel had not counted the money but accepted Edwin Van Aken's statement as to the amount.

DeGraff Saw Mrs. Vincent.

Chester DeGraff of Port Ewen, the second witness, testified he knew the Van Akens. He also knew Mrs. Elizabeth Vincent, whom he had seen on Main street on October 22. This was two blocks from the Van Aken house. Mrs. Vincent had a dog with her. It was then between 12:10 and 12:15.

No cross-examination.

EDWIN VAN AKEN VISITS HIS PORT EWEN HOME.

Edwin Van Aken found a Freeman reporter and photographer awaiting him when he arrived at his home in Port Ewen on Monday and consented to pose for a photograph. The picture shows, from left to right, Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier, Jailer Seth Jocelyn, Edwin Van Aken and Frederick Stephan. The first and last named are the lawyers defending Van Aken. The picture was taken in front of Van Aken's barn and all are wearing roses in their buttonholes just picked from a bush on the premises and presented to them by Van Aken. Mr. Brinnier also holds a rose in his hand. This is the first and only portrait that Van Aken has posed for since his arrest.

Neighbor Saw Mrs. Van Aken in Morning.

Mrs. Elizabeth Vincent, whose house is the second from the Van Aken house on Broadway, Port Ewen, testified her dog ran away on October 22. She went after the dog and might have been gone twenty minutes or half an hour before she got back. When she left her house she went to the house of her daughter, Mrs. Terwilliger on Bayard street and returned directly home. On her way back she met Mr. DeGraff. She took the dog with her when she went to her daughter's house. The dog had not run away in the morning but ran away in the afternoon.

During the morning while Mrs. Vincent was in her yard calling her dog, she heard Mrs. Van Aken calling her cat in the Van Aken yard and saw the top of her head. This was before she went to her daughter's.

Q.—"Wasn't it just a few minutes before you went to your daughter's?"

A.—"It was in the morning. I can't give the time any nearer than that."

Mrs. Vincent was a witness before the grand jury.

But Can't Fix the Time.

Cross-examination:

Q.—"What time you saw Mrs. Van Aken that morning you haven't the faintest idea, have you?"

A.—"Not the slightest."

Q.—"Do you know whether it was before ten o'clock or after ten?"

A.—"No, I couldn't tell at all."

Mr. Brinnier.—"What time did you eat dinner that day, lady?"

A.—"I got up from the dinner table at two o'clock. I spent all the morning in the strawberry patch."

Q.—"Do you remember Mr. Dibble being in your yard to see about some tracks?"

Mrs. Vincent said the yard was filled with foot tracks, and she was sure they were made by her husband, who had brought a quantity of stuff in the yard a few days before.

Did Not See Stranger in Van Aken Yard.

Mr. Cunningham.—"All the morning you were in the yard did you see any strange man in the Van Aken yard?"

A.—"Nobody but Mrs. Van Aken, and I spoke to her."

Q.—"What sort of fence is between the two yards?"

A.—"A wire fence."

Mr. Brinnier and Mr. Cunningham had a lengthy argument over an objection by the latter. The objection was sustained by Judge Jenkins. Mr. Brinnier continued to argue until Judge Jenkins informed him that the court had ruled.

Taunts Bring Threat of Contempt.

"Why do you smile?" shouted Mr. Brinnier.

"Never mind, Mr. Brinnier," said Judge Jenkins. "That will do, or I will have to fine you for contempt of court."

'Fine me for contempt?" shouted Mr. Brinnier. "Yes, fine me for contempt. The jury can see and I can see."

"Limit to All Things," Says Judge.

"That will do, Mr. Brinnier," said Judge Jenkins. "There is a limit to all things."

"Yes, there is a limit to all things," said Mr. Brinnier.

Mayor Canfield Takes a Hand.

"What size shoe do you wear?" Mr. Brinnier asked of Mrs. Vincent.

"I object to that," called out Mayor Canfield.

"Object to what?" asked Judge Jenkins.

"Object to the witness asking asking Mr. Cunningham if she can answer," said Mayor Canfield.

"We want that on the record, too," said Mr. Brinnier.

"I didn't see that," said Judge Jenkins. "Let it——"

Record Will Show Evereything.

"We object to having it stricken out," shouted Mr. Brinnier. "We want it all in. We want your Honor's remarks in the record—all of them."

"You may have them," said Judge Jenkins. "Let it all stand. There is no objection to it.

"Then why don't you object?" asked Mr. Brinnier of District Attorney Cunningham.

"I haven't any objection," said District Attorney Cunningham.

Bank Deposit Was Made By Van Aken.

L. L. Osterhoudt was re-called. To Mr. Brinier's questions he said he was a local preacher of the Methodist Episcopal Church and had known Edwin Van Aken in a business way for 15 years. The deposit of $3,000 was made by Edwin Van Aken. Mrs. Van Aken was not present. Van Aken's reputation for being a peaceable and lawabiding citizen were good.

On cross-examination, Mr. Osterhoudt said he knew nothing of the personal relations between Mr. Van Aken and his wife during the few weeks preceding her death, and did not know personally about Van Aken's habits. He had heard he was addicted to drunkenness but not that he smashed dishes or locked his wife out of the house. He was not an associate of Van Aken.

Local Sherlock Holmes On Scene.

William Dibble of Port Ewen, the next witness, whose house is the third from the school house and a quarter of a mile from the Van Aken house, testified that during the afternoon of October 22 he was at the Van Aken house for three-quarters of an hour, during which he went over the premises. The cistern was being emptied when he arrived and Mr. McLaughlin was getting ready to go down when someone said, "Mr. Dibble, mind that a minute." Between the chicken coop and the apple tree, in the soft earth, he saw the print of a left foot, pointed south, toward the corner of the Van Aken lot. Later, in the corner of the lot, he saw the same foot print and called the attention of someone he supposed was an officer. They examined the two foot prints and in the Vincent yard, about ten feet from the fence, they found a third foot print of the same kind, pointed away from the Van Aken property. Mr. Dibble used a weed in measuring the three foot prints, which were the same in size and appearance. They looked as though made by a heavy rubber. He used the weed in measuring his own shoe. Mr. Dibble wears a No. 8 but the three prints were made by a shoe at least two inches longer. Later he called Mrs. Vincent's attention to the foot prints.

Nearest Foot Print Ten Feet From Fence.

Cross-examination:

He called attention of Mrs. Vincent only to the foot print in her yard. There was no foot print within four feet of the Van Aken fence—there was sod along the Vincent side. On the Van Aken side of the fence there was soft earth but he would not say how far the earth extended along the fence. The nearest foot print to the fence was ten feet away.

When Dibble arrived at the Van Aken property the officers were there and a number of others. He saw others were inquisitive and became inquisitive himself.

Q.—"Can you say you found those footprints before or after anyone else had examined the yards for footprints?"

A.—"I can't say."

Q.—"You don't know Sheriff Doyle and Mr. Lounsbery had examined that part of the yard?"

A.—"I don't know, no."

Q.—"You don't know it was, Mr. Lounsbery you spoke to?"

A.—"I don't know who it was."

Q.—"But the young man didn't pay much attention to you, did he?"

Objected to by Mr. Brinnier on the ground the young man didnt' know enough to pay attention.

There were lots of other footprints in the Vincent yard.

Dibble Reasons Like Sherlock Holmes.

The reason he thought the prints were made by a rubber or rubber-soled shoe was because he could see the dots made by the rubber. The three prints were all in soft earth but were very indistinct.

Q.—"Were the footprints you made sharp and distinct and heavy?"

A.—"Yes, very sharp and deep."

Q.—"But these were indistinct?"

A.—"They were not made by a sharp and distinct shoe, like mine were."

Re-direct examination:

Neither witness nor Mr. Lounsbery tried to avoid making footprints in the soft earth.

Q.—"Was there soft sod along the fence?"

A.—"There generally is."

Q.—"Did these footprints indicate that the man who made them was trying to get along in a sneaking manner?"

Objected to and sustained.

At this point court adjourned until two o'clock.

ANNUAL ANNANIAS STORY ABOUT CIRCUS

For some time past rumors have been circulated in Kingston that the city authorities have refused to grant permits to any circus allowing them to show in this city, but an investigation soon shows that the rumors, which become more persistent each day, are as usual the work of the Busy Street Liar and are without the slightest foundation, but of course that fact will not stop the circulation of the tale by the B. S. L.

So persistent have become the stories that Mayor Canfield was asked about the matter this morning and said that no circus has so far applied for a licence to show in Kingston and that the tales being circulated were entirely without foundation. "No application" said the mayor "has been made to either the police department which issues the licence or to myself."

The tales told by the B. S. L. ascribe the refusing of permits to various reasons One was that the circus being allowed to come to Kingston would interfere with the firemen's convention next week. Another was that owing to the trouble had with circuses in the past over parading in the lower section of the city caused the refusal to grant a permit. Neither story has the slightest foundation of fact.

Mayor Canfield said this morning that he understood some circus was coming to Kingston later in the season. As yet, however, none had applied for a permit. If the circus people had applied for a licence to show in Kingston it would have been granted and the mayor said he knew no reason why the circus people had decided to omit Kingston the early part of this season when it showed down the river but did not come here.

The fact that no circus representative has been in Kingston to secure a permit will not and cannot be expected to put a stop to the activities of the B. S. L. As one might ask what is the use of having a B. S. L. unless he can circulate a story which is an untruth.

Catskill's New Hospital.

That the new hospital at Catskill is an absolute necessity and will prove a great boon for the unfortunate of that vicinity, has already been demonstrated. The hospital is ideally located and is indeed one of the finest of its kind in this section of the state. The ward on the top floor is finished in white enamel and the immaculate appearance of the other apartments must be seen to be appreciated. On Thursday the new hospital was formally opened and was visited by almost the entire populace of Catskill, who commended Miss Anna Woerner, R. N., and Miss Theresa Corrigan, R. N., of this city, the experts in charge. Upon the opening day it was found necessary to perform an operation on Mrs. Grace Green of Catskill, which was successfully accomplished by Dr. Chandler of Kingston and Dr. DeSilva of Catskill. The people of Catskill have every justification in being proud of this new institution and physicians of Kingston bespeak a most successful career for the skill and painstaking of the nurses in charge.

Butler's Closing Sale.

While the Butler clothing store of Kingston is forced to close its doors owing to the general depression in business, the men and women of Kingston will reap the benefit. Butlers are going to run a going-out of-business sale commencing Saturday morning of this week. Make sure to get a Friday's paper and learn of the wonderful bargains that are to be offered during Butler's selling-out sale. The entire stock of dependable ladies', men's and children's clothing must be disposed of within a very limited time. $35,000 be dis-

HIGHWAY ROBBERY IN NEW YORK CITY

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 8—In broad daylight and within sight of scores of pedestrians, three highwaymen today held up the cashier and superintendent of the Borden Condensed Milk Company and robbed them of $8,500, taking $7,500 in cash and $1,000 in checks.

So quickly and throughly did the trio work that they made good their escape almost before the victims knew what had happened.

George S. Lighthart, the cashier and Thomas J. Boyd, the superintendent, were driving in a light buggy to the Tremont branch of the Corn Exchange Bank to make the day's deposit. At One Hundred and Eightieth street and Park avenue, the highwaymen halted the buggy, dragged the two men from it and beat them almost into insensibility with the butts of their revolvers. By the time Lighthart and Boyd scrambled to their feet, the robbers had got away across the New York Central viaduct, where they leaped into a waiting automobile and disappeared.

Smashed by a Ford.

Joseph Israel, the tailor with a shop at No. 316 Fair street, is congratulating himself that he was born under a lucky star. Sunday afternoon Mr. Israel and another young man hired a rig of Elmer Molyneaux, the Fair street liveryman, to go out to Cuneo's hotel at Lake Katrine, where they intended to have dinner. They were just driving by the hotel when a Ford runabout, said to be owned and driven by H. E. Meredith of Napanoch, came behind them and in some manner crashed into the wagon. Joe's friend leaped and escaped uninjured, but Joe was hurled from the wagon, landing on his right side. A telephone message was sent to Mr. Molyneaux and in his automobile he hurried to the scene and brought Joe to the Kingston City Hospital, where after he had received treatment he was taken to his home. His entire right side pains him, but fortunately he escaped having any bones broken, although he is badly bruised and shaken up. The wagon was wrecked and the horse was cut about the legs and body.

Street Work Progressing.

Street Superintendent Van Keuren has completed about three-fourths of the oiling of Abeel street from Post street to the city line. A heavy grade of binding oil is being used.

The laying of concrete sidewalks in front of the municipal building and central fire station on O'Reilly street has been completed and the walks are open to pedesterians. The work at the first station was done by Homer Burger and in front of the city building by the street department.

The street superintendent has a force of men building a concrete bridge at Abeel and Dunne streets.

Romer Makes Quick Return.

The steamer William F. Romer, which left here on Sunday night at 5 o'clock made a hurried return trip to Rondout on Monday afternoon, having on board a heavy cargo of perishable freight. The boat returned about 6:30 o'clock. It is said that the Central Hudson Steamboat Company soon intends to place the steamer James T. Brett at work on the route between Poughkeepsie and New York in order to handle the fruit service. The steamer B. B. O. Odell made a quick run to this port on Monday night arriving here at midnight with a heavy cargo aboard.

Wallkill Bridge Contract.

The town board of Shawangunk has awarded the contract for the construction of the concrete bridge across the Wallkill at that place to the Rennell Construction Company. This company's figures were the lowest. Anson J. Fowler appeared for J. M. Birch and J. H. Van Steenburgh offering the right of way for $500. The board offered $100 which was not accepted and the property will probably be condemned.

The Grails Will Sail.

The third annual moonlight sail of the Knights of the Holy Grail will be held on Wednesday evening on the steamer Bunker. The Grail quartet will render selections on board and refreshments will be for sale. All are invited to attend.

INCONSISTENT?

IN these progressive days, when anyone openly declares that some one thing in particular "cannot be done" we sincerely feel that he talks foolishly.

And yet, when anyone has the audacity to look us in the face and hint that someone at some time may produce a brew that will exceed our

If this is inconsistent—and consistency is truly a jewel—we can only say that we never were very strong for jewelry anyway.

OUR DAILY PATTERN.

1244—A Popular Style. Over Blouse Dress for Misses and Small Women.

For combinations of materials this style is especially desirable. It is lovely for the new soft cool cotton materials, or for crepe, poplin, challie, cashmere or serge. As here shown figured crepe in blue and green tones was used for the underwaist, with green taffeta for over blouse and skirt. In white ratine, with batiste for the underwaist this style is very pleasing. The pattern is cut in 4sizes: 14, 16, 17 and 18 years. The 16 year size will require 3 yards of 27 inch material for the underwaist, and 5½ yards for the overdress. The skirt measures about 2¾ yards at its lower edge.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 10 cents in silver or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Rondout, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

ANNIVERSARY OF FATHER HICKEY

The Rev. John J. Hickey, pastor of St. Mary's Church, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood today. This afternoon the rector was entertained at the school hall when a fine musical and literary program was rendered by the children of the parochial school under the skillful direction of the sisters in charge of the school. The rector was the recipient of a fine gift from the children. This evening the members of the congregation will give a reception for Father Hickey at the school hall. Father Hickey before becoming rector of St. Mary's was assistant to Mgr. Burtsell and then was transferred to St. Peter's Church at Rosendale where he also had charge of St. Patrick's Church at Whiteport and built a church at High Falls and did a wonderful work there. Upon the death of Mgr. Burtsell he was made rector of St. Mary's Church and continued in the work of upbuilding the church. The fine school hall will stand as a monument to his indefatigable efforts for the welfare of his parish.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES.

A jump of two cents per gallon in the price of gasoline was made this morning by all garages handling gasoline in the city. Gasoline has been selling at 13 cents a gallon and this morning the price was raised to 15 cents a gallon. About a year ago gasoline sold in this city for from 20 to 22 cents a gallon but a gasoline war ensued which resulted in dropping the price lower and lower until lately all dealers handling gasoline have been selling it at 13 cents.

The board of governors of the Automobile Club of Ulster County held its regular meeting on Monday evening at the club headquarters in the Eagle Hotel. The club has ordered additional copies of the official road guide of New York state which are being distributed as fast as received among the club members. Dr. Meinhardt, the club secretary, read a communication received from the state superintendent of weights and measures calling attention to the sections of the law regulating the sale of gasoline. When sold in containers gasoline must be sold by standard measure and the container shall be plainly and conspicuously marked. A variation of three per cent will be allowed. When pumped or poured into the tank of an automobile, motor boat, or any other tank or when sold from bulk a sales slip showing the full amount delivered must be given to the purchaser. The state superintendent in conclusion stated that "for your own protection your members should insist upon dealers obeying the law," and asking that violations be reported to the department. Considerable routine business was also transacted before the board adjourned.

Blue Blood Versus Oil

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Billy Perkins had the usual American assurance, but it never got into the limelight till he went to Spain as a clerk in the American embassy. Billy had means and no taste for business. Indeed, since his living was ground out for him by coupons which fell like gold leaves from sundry bonds he had inherited, what he wanted was an apology for occupation. A friend having been appointed secretary of legation at Madrid, he secured Billy a position as brevet clerk, which gave him the right to say that he was attached to the embassy, but he was seldom if ever called upon to do any work.

As an attache of the legation he received invitations, and, since Americans are considered an unconventional people, he was accorded social liberties that other men were not granted. For instance, there were families which he was permitted to visit as young men visit in America—that is, he was not forced to converse with young women from the sidewalk, they standing on a balcony high above his head. He was permitted to see certain young ladies in their homes, but not alone. Some member of the family other than the lady on whom he called was always present.

One young lady in whose home he was accorded an entrance was a daughter of Don Sebastiano Herrera, a Spanish grandee whose family tree was planted in the time of Ferdinand and Isabella. Dona Inez, the daughter, was destined for some nobleman who would be considered worthy to enter the Herrera family. As for Billy Perkins, had he ten times the fortune he possessed he was not for a moment to be thought of as a husband for her.

Nevertheless the Herreras had traveled abroad a good deal and had thrown off some of the most ultra of their Spanish conventional forms. Their daughter met men at balls, and occasionally one was invited to her home—of course only by her father or mother. Billy Perkins met her at a function given by his chief, the ambassador, and fell desperately in love with her.

Dona Inez evinced a desire to learn English, and when Billy offered to teach her her mother was much pleased with the offer. The good lady had a high admiration for the English nobility and had formed a design of taking her daughter to England, hoping that her rare beauty would catch an English nobleman. However this may be, Billy was permitted to come to the house two evenings in the week to give Dona Inez lessons in the English language. Of course her mother or some member of the family who could be relied upon was present to watch that no lovemaking passed between the two young persons. Moreover, whoever was on watch understood enough English to know if Billy were trying to work that language for the purpose of making love, though, since Dona Inez did not understand a word of English, this was hardly necessary.

Nothing is so delightful to two young persons of opposite sex as to outwit those who are placed on guard over them. Billy's method of teaching English was to have his pupil read something printed in that language or convert something printed from Spanish into the English tongue. This required the use of a Spanish and English dictionary.

One evening when the two were at work using the dictionary every few minutes, Billy, turning the leaves, stopped and put his finger on the word "your." Then he turned to the words "eyes" and put his finger on that word. In this way he spelled out "your eyes are like beautiful twin lakes, and your lashes are like the rushes growing on the borders." Then Inez took the dictionary and by the same means said, "You Americans are great flatterers." This was followed by a sentence from Billy—"There is no such beauty in America as yours."

These few communications occupied half an hour, but what time was lost in looking up words was gained in the fervor of the sentences. In two or three evenings Billy had made as much love as some men with every facility would make in a year. And Dona Inez, if she was not an apt scholar at learning English, certainly understood with marvelous facility what was said to her by this method of communication.

Before Dona Inez had learned enough English to catch a British nobleman she had been caught by an American scamp who should have been put in the stocks for daring to make love to the daughter of a Spanish grandee. However, he came out frankly at last and one morning, marching boldly into the presence of Don Sebastiano, asked him for his daughter's hand. The old gentleman looked at the American brevet clerk aghast and asked him what he meant. Billy replied that he meant exactly what he said.

"Are you aware," asked Don Sebastiano, "that our family were nobles at a time when the land in which you were born was inhabited by savages?"

"I am," said Billy, "and are you aware that my ancestors drove your ancestors out of Texas? My ancestors bought an oil tract of your ancestors, and now I am in receipt of $20,000 a month from the property?"

Billy intended by this statement to strike the nail on the head, and he did, for Don Sebastiano, with all his blue blood, was as poor as a church mouse. Billy married Dona Inez, and the pair now live in winter in Spain, in summer in America.

Always keep alum in the house. It checks bleeding wounds, and for bleeding of the mouth or tongue a wash of cold water in which alum has been dissolved is very effective.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 8, 1915.

The construction by the Canadian Pacific Railroad of a tunnel five miles long at a cost $10,000,000 in order to shorten its route four miles and materially reduce the grade emphasizes the fact that more careful study is being given to railroad operation than was manifested when railroad construction was in its early stages. From an operating standpoint, a straight line is not always the most desirable route for a railroad. The cost of construction, maintenance and operation most often make it desirable to avoid hills or valleys instead of passing through or over them. Consideration of the same elements of cost sometimes makes it desirable also to shorten existing routes and when such action is taken, as in the Canadian Pacific case, it indicates that the railroad is not being operated from a stock-market viewpoint. Railroads do not spend $10,000,000 nowadays unless they see a return in reduced cost of operation or maintenance. The immediate reduction of cost may be small in the aggregate; the saving in the individual train-haul may be infinitesimal, but in such a case study has convinced the railroad officials that there is a guarantee of increased transportation whose total will be sufficient to more than balance the interest on the initial cast. The same study devoted to municipal problems and municipal expenditures would result in the same saving which corporations endeavor to accomplish, but most municipalities change their officials too often to carry out any definite purpose or policy of that kind, in addition to which very few municipal officials understand the rudiments of finance.

If all the counties comprising the Ninth judicial district are as quick to recognize Judge Albert H. F. Seeger's qualifications for judicial honors as Ulster county would be if she had the chance of voting for him, there would be no opposition to his election this fall as Justice of the Supreme Court. In two important criminal cases in which our own county judge was disqualified from presiding, Judge Seeger came here to hold court. The impression he created was so favorable that throughout Ulster county, irrespective of political affiliation, there was a regret that Providence, or fate, or whatever else governs men's lives had led him to select Orange rather than Ulster for his home. By temperament, education, training and experience Judge Seeger is pre-eminently qualified for the bench. Fair and impartial to a marked degree, possessing ability of high order, quick of comprehension, with sound judgment and positive action, he quickly gained and always has retained the full confidence and unswerving loyal friendship of laymen and lawyers, to whom his unbiased mind, keen intellect and irreproachable character and conduct have appealed as representing the highest type of Americanism. If Judge Seeger were to be voted for in Ulster county it is not difficult to see that the most popular movement that could be undertaken would be to make his election unanimous.

Jokes run in cycles, the same as crime, war and revivals, and a good joke, no matter how old it may be, needs only to be laid away after being worn down to a frazzled edge, because after the lapse of a few years it can be brought into the sunlight of mirth and again be made to serve a useful purpose. The principal reason why jokes are perennial is that human nature from the time the bump of humor was created has not changed its location on the human cranium and men look upon certain phases of life with laughter the same as they did when Methuselah wore knee pants. The risibility of mankind changes not but it is only conditions that change and they of course require a readjustment of the joke if it is to be appreciated. Just now the census joke will enjoy particular popularity in New York state. After a few weeks the essence of the joke will be placed in the store room to await the next enumeration, federal, state or municipal. Someone may try to adapt the joke to next fall's campaign or next winter's blizzard but such persons should have no standing in the community. Jokes applicable to particular subjects should be used only for such subjects. When otherwise applied they lose their zest and the joke-teller becomes a bore.

THE PART OF BOYS—AND MEN.

(By Our Woman Editor.)

The other day I heard a little discussion concerning the extermination of flies, one woman declaring that they were with us in too vast multitudes ever to hope to rid ourselves of the pests, while another predicted that it was only a matter of time when the house fly—musca domestica, if you like—would have buzzed his last distressing song and made his last pilgrimage over food and other personal belongings.

It remains for time to settle the question, but meanwhile the small boy is doing his best to help in the crusade, and so successful is his best that some of us are quite satisfied to take sides with the optimist.

From different parts of the country, year after year, reports have come in concerning Boy Scouts and just plain boys who have entered contests in this anti-fly crusade, and while it seems right much like an attempt to gather the sands from the seashore, the boys certainly have accomplished wonders.

The chief thing is to enlist their interest, here, there and everywhere, and leave the rest to the boys; though, one must confess that while there is something decidedly manly and useful about the contests, there is a savor one cannot just like in this fly-catching business. Yet if flies are half as deadly as they are said to be, they must be fought to a finish, if may be, and we must trust the boys to come out from the scrimmage all right.

It will show them one thing, if nothing more, and that is the way little folk can do big work by pulling together. A lot of boys exterminating a lot of flies in one town away down south may do a little good, but not so very much when one thinks of our big, stretching country and the myriads of flies. But a lot of boys down south and a lot more scattered all over the country will have a big story to tell when the records are all in.

But there is another element, so far as the boys are concerned. It makes them feel that they are doing something of importance and gives them a notion that it is the part of a boy to do things worth while, just as it is the destiny of a man, if he is true to the best that is in him, to get well in the midst of activities.

And an active, self-reliant boy who has begun to realize his own dignity as a factor, is a close second to an active, dependable man who enters upon the work of the world in a big, serious way; and both are forces to reckon with, the one for the promise he gives, the other for what he is, and what he is doing.

We read much of the manner of women for whom men are willing to go through deep waters, and sometimes there is truth in it, oftener none; but we rarely read anything about the kind of man that seems most true and perhaps most appealing to women.

It may be venturesome to picture a type, but it is not saying much or going far astray, if one permits herself to avow that the average woman—a very safe person to quote, you know—has boundless admiration for a man who, upon occasion, is ready to throw aside his dress coat and go to work upon the issue at hand, who has the courage of his convictions and knows how to fight for them.

But, gracious! It is of boys and flies that one is talking.

And yet, it is not such a far cry between the boy who, when the need arises, is ready to say, "Here am I; take me," and the man who meets an emergency squarely and effectively.

If it happens to be boys and flies, one must admire the boy who takes hold and helps; and if it is men—well, the average woman knows all about it then, for she has small enough use for a man who shifts about on the comfortable edge of things, with never a thought or a care for those who are out where the fight is thickest.

And, you know—

"The child is father of the man."

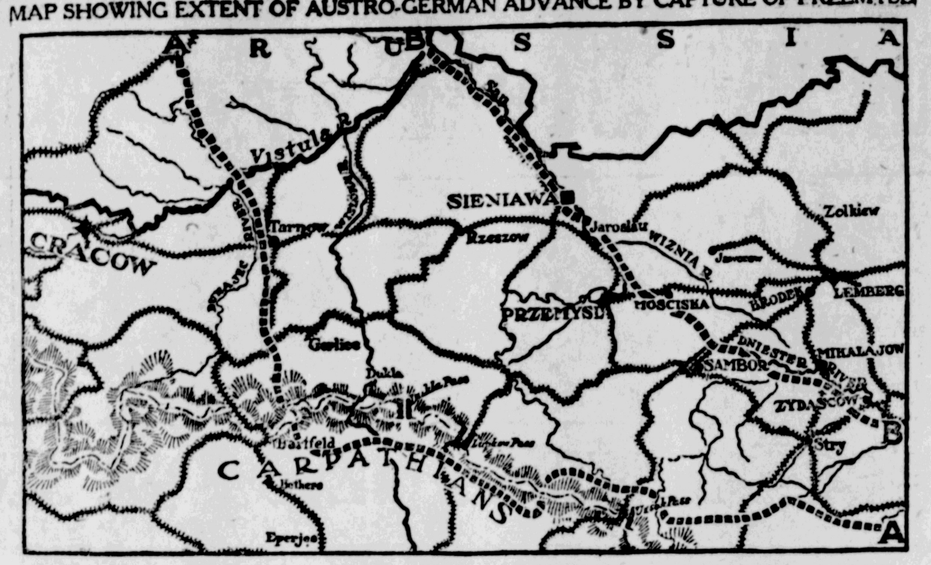
Last April the strawberry patch of W. W. Van Keuren on the Saugerties road was damaged by fire started by sparks from a passing locomotive on the West Shore railroad. Mr. Van Keuren got in touch with the railroad and said that unless the damage was made good he would bring an action against the company to recover. The suit was set down for trial before Judge McKenzie's bar of justice at Port Ewen for today but on Sunday the railroad company settled with Mr. Van Keuren thus obviating the necessity of a trial.



MAP SHOWING EXTENT OF AUSTRO-GERMAN ADVANCE BY CAPTURE OR PYZEMSYL.

The tremendous scope of the Austro-German victory in Gallcia, which in a single month has wrested from Russia practically all the spoils of the eight months' campaign which cost her hundreds of thousands of lives, is indicated by the above map. The Russian position when the Teutonic drive started, early in May, is shown by the line A-A. The present position, insecurely held by the beaten and disorganized Russian armies, is along the line B-B.

The winning of Gallcia and the Carpathian passes from the Austrians had been the one great success of the allies in the war. The battle of the Carpathians alone is estimated to have cost Russia 500,000 lives. In Russia's hands they were a vital danger to Austria, opening the way for an invasion which should devast Hungary. The siege and capture of Przemsyl itself which was only one feature of this great campaign, had occupied an army of over 300,000 for half a year.

The Teutonic campaign for the recovery of the ground began just a month ago yesterday. Striking with terrific force at the Russian line just north of the Carpathians, General Mackensen drove it swiftly back—so swiftly that large parts of the Russian forces which held the line south of the mountains were cut off when the Austrians seized the passes from the north. With the passes cleared of Russans, fresh Austrian armies passed through the passes and drove the Russians north and east on Przemsyl.

CHILD FOUND IN CHURCH CALLED THE "WAR BABY."

The picture shows New York's first "war baby."

New York, June 7.—At Bellevue they call him the war baby—America's first war baby—and are speculating about the fate of his father who, they think, may have gone to the defense of the Tricolor when the Germans were menacing Paris.

The only reason they call him the war baby is because he was found in one of the pews of the Church of St. Vincent de Paul in West Twenty-third street, which is in the heart of New York's French colony. Besides he has the soft olive skin, the big brown eyes and black hair of the Latin.

But yesterday one of the priests from the Carmelite Church baptized the baby. They gave him the name of Thomas Knott—not because the name fits or really belongs to the war baby, but because it was the next name on the Bellevue babies list of names.

The police of the West Twentieth street station, who turned him over to Bellevue, wanted the boy named Paul Pau, but the list was made up before the war.

Anne of Russia's Ice Palace.

Probably the most remarkable building constructed wholly of ice was the palace built on the Neva by the Czarina Anne of Russia. Large blocks of ice were cut and squared with great care and laid on one another by skillful masons, who cemented the joints with water, which immediately froze. The building, when completed, was fifty-six feet long, seventeen and one-half feet broad and twenty-one feet high. It was of but one story. The facade contained a door surmounted by an ornamental pediment and six windows, the frames and panes of which were all of ice. An elaborate balustrade, adorned with statues, ran along the top of the facade and another balustrade surrounded the building at the level of the ground. The grounds were further adorned with a life size figure of an elephant, with his mahout on his back. A stream of water was thrown from the elephant's trunk by day and a flame of naphtha by night.

A tent of ice contained a hot bath, in which persons actually bathed. There were also several cannons and mortars of ice, which were loaded with bullets of ice and iron and discharged.

"Left-Handed" Parrots.

Parrots seize objects with the left claw by preference or exclusively, and they have been found to make a readier use of the left claw for climbing than the right.

Bullet Stopping Tricks.

Five feet of clay, three feet of loose earth, or two and a half feet of sand will stop a modern rifle bullet at the closest range; but, curiously enough, as the layman may think, ramming earth hard reduces its resisting power, and high velocity bullets have less penetration in sand at short than at medium range. Eighteen inches of sand between boards is bullet proof, also nine inches of well built brick work. Soft wood, like fir, across the grain is bullet proof at point blank range if forty-eight inches thick, or at 500 yards if half as thick. Similarly, twenty-seven inches of hard wood, like oak, is point blank proof, or fifteen inches at 500 yards. Half an inch of wrought iron or mild steel, a quarter of an inch of hard steel, or a fifth of an inch of special steel is bullet proof. So are six inches of shingle, fifteen inches of coal, or, as some people may be surprised to know, eight feet of snow.—London Express.

China's Salt Wells.

Salt wells in China have been operated for hundreds of years, and in the Tzelinching district, especially, have built up a prosperous community. In some cases the wells are 300 feet deep. The salt is obtained in the form of brine, which is raised in bamboo tubes by means of crude derricks, the motive power for which is furnished by water buffaloes.

DOVES OF PEACE FLEW AWAY.

Probably They Have Gone to See the European War.

The two doves used by Emmett and Emmett in the Irish specialty presented by them at the Kingston Opera House flew off the stage and through an open window in the building at the close of the matinee on Monday afternoon and have not been seen since. Probably the doves heard the call of the pigeons that roost in in the vicinity of John street and take their meals from the pop-corn wagon of the vender on Wall street and have joined forces to make a raid on the pop-corn. Possibly they were doves of peace and have gone back to Europe. A reward has been offered by the opera house management for the safe return of the doves.

Carnival is a Big One.

A slight idea of the size of the carnival to be here under the auspices of the Central Hook & Ladder Company next week when Mr. Gross, the ground superintendent of the Levitt, Meyerhoff shows came to Kingston on Saturday and looked over the Athletic Field where the carnival will be held. After ascertaining the dimensions of the ground he notified Mr. Levitt at Poughkeepsie, where the carnival is showing this week, that he did not believe the Athletic Field was large enough. Mr. Levitt came to Kingston on Sunday and in company with Under Sheriff Hornbeck and E. Otis Van Aken, the committee of the local fire company, visited the grounds when Mr. Levitt confirmed Mr. Gross's opinion. Mr. Levitt said it would be either necessary to move the fence back to the railroad tracks or to take down the fence. Just what will be done is not known but the question has been taken up with John J. Cuneo, who owns the field. The carnival, however, will be held on the grounds and the fence will be either taken down or set further back.

Mrs. Denier's former husband was Daniel Sully, the famous actor, now dead.

The Still, Small Voice.

One day during the reading lesson we came to the word "conscience." Trying to make the meaning clear, I started by saying: "It is that little voice within us—" but was quickly interrupted by a little fellow who exclaimed: "'Yes'm, I know. I've heard mine growl."

He Remembered.

Mrs. Bickers was reading the latest war news from across the pond. "Let me see," she mused, "when was it war was declared?" "Is it possible, my dear," rejoined her husband, "that you have forgotten we were married June 3, 1905?"

Albany Maccabees Fail to Prevent Public Interference.

In connection with the carnival held at Albany last week by the Knights of the Maccabees the carnival management ran a number of games which the police closed because they claimed they were gambling. The carnival started on Monday and the games ran until Tuesday night. The carnival was to close on Saturday night, when a large crowd was expected, and the Knights of the Maccabees thought if they could procure permission to let the games run that night, they would take in enough money to clear expenses and leave something in the treasury besides.

Accordingly, the Maccabees procured from Judge Chester an order to show cause why William Van Rensselaer, as commissioner of safety, Chief of Police Hyatt and Captain Keith should not be restrained from interfering with the carnival, and the matter was heard by Judge Hasbrouck at the court house in this city on Saturday.

The Maccabees claimed that the games which had been closed could not be considered gambling because everyone was sure to get something, and whether they received additional gifts depended entirely on their skill, steadiness of nerves and good eyesight.

"Hoop-La" consisted of a small table with raised discs on which were various articles. If a ring thrown by the player settled around the disc, he received the prize shown on the disc, otherwise he received a small article from a stock of goods kept for that purpose.

"Souvenir Post Cards" was a game which began with the sale of six numbered souvenir postal cards for 25 cents. After a certain number of cards had been sold, the holders became entitled to shoot at tags beneath which were duplicate numbers to those printed on the postal cards. If they hit the duplicate numbers, they received prizes; otherwise they received only the postal cards.

"The Country Grocery Store" was run by the Maccabees and contained articles which had been contributed. Everyone who went in the store bought a numbered fly-swatter, and on the closing night they were to receive the article in the store containing the duplicate number.

After listening to arguments, Judge Hasbrouck said that it would be impossible to try out on affidavits the question of whether the games were gambling. Counsel suggested that it was desirable to obtain a prompt decision because the carnival closed Saturday evening, and Judge Hasbrouck said he would go over the papers at once.

As soon as court adjourned, Judge Hasbrouck devoted himself to examination of papers used on the application, and before the lawyers left the court house he handed down a decision denying the motion for an injunction. He held that it was the duty of the police not only to enforce the law but to determine whether the law was being violated, and with this power the court should not interfere.

WHERE IS TOWN LINE?

Shawangunk and Mamakating in Dispute Over a Bridge.

Application to the supreme court as provided by the highway law for an order to compel an adjoining town to pay its proportion of the cost of construction of a town-line bridge was made to Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday by the town of Mamakating, Sullivan county, which desires the town of Shawangunk, Ulster county, to bear one-half the cost of a bridge across Plattekill creek, between Burlingham and Wallkill.

Former County Judge George H. Smith of Monticello appeared for the town of Mamakating and the application, which was opposed by County Attorney John W. Eckert on behalf of the town of Shawangunk. Mr. made a preliminary objection that neither the county of Sullivan nor the county of Ulster had been made parties to the proceeding, and an order making both counties parties to the proceeding was directed.

The town of Shawangunk claims that the course of Plattekill creek was changed in 1862 since when the bridge in question has been entirely within the bounds of Sullivan county and that it does not connect the Ulster and Sullivan county towns.

On this question a referee to take testimony will be appointed by Judge Hasbrouck on presentation of the order. It was agreed by counsel that the referee ought not to be a resident of either county.

JURY'S VISIT TO VAN AKEN'S HOME

The proceedings in connection with the visit of the jury in the Van Aken case to Van Aken's home on Monday morning were interesting and unusual. When they reached the ferryboat Riverside, on the Rondout side of the creek, Judge Jenkins informed them:

"Gentlemen of the jury, this is the Sleightsburgh ferry."

At the Sleightsburgh side, before proceeding up the hill, Judge Jenkins announced:

"Gentlemen, this is the Sleight store."

There were so many automobiles that all could not be carried over the creek by the Riverside on one trip, and two trips were necessary to take them across. The jurors went over on the first boat, and were deposited on Broadway in front of the Van Aken home, where George Van Aken, Edwin Van Aken's brother, was sweeping the porch.

When all the automobiles had arrived and their occupants had alighted, the jury, after posing for a group photograph, were addressed by Judge Jenkins, who said:

"Gentlemen, this is the Edwin Van Aken property. This street is Broadway."

Go to Rear of Lot.

Judge Jenkins led the way, with the jurors and the officers with whom they were in charge following, after which came Edwin Van Aken and Jailer Seth Jocelyn. The attorneys and representatives of their office brought up the rear.

Judge Jenkins led the way to the corner of Broadway and Stout avenue, thence down that street past the Van Aken barn to Green street, and around on that street to the rear of the Van Aken lot.

"Gentlemen, this is Green street," announced Judge Jenkins.

The jurors spent several minutes looking up and down the street, then moved over to the rear of the Banks property, adjoining, and as far as Vincent property, which adjoins the Banks property, the three lots extending from street to street, from Broadway to Green street.

They walked back to the front of the house, and then walked through the Van Aken lot to the rear fence, within a few feet of where they had been standing a few minutes before, and then moved slowly up the path to the front of the house.

The grass in the Van Aken lot evidently has not been cut this year and was still wet with dew, as were the weeds with which the back of the garden, where corn and other vegetables had been growing last year, is overgrown. The jurors stopped to look at the woodshed and the two large apple trees in the yard. They noticed also the cistern, the top of which George Van Aken opened and in doing which broke the cross-pieces which held the board cistern-top together.

Jurors go in the House.

Assembled again at the front of the house, with Edwin Van Aken and Jailer Jocelyn bringing up the rear, the jury was taken into the house through the front door, thence into the parlor at the right of the hallway, and from that to the sitting room adjoining, where the desk from which Edwin Van Aken claimed $220 had been taken formerly stood. The books had been removed from the desk and were piled on a sofa and the floor. The most prominent book among the lot was a copy of the Biographical Record of Ulster County. In passing from the sitting room to the kitchen, the jurors passed the wall telephone from which Edwin Van Aken telephoned to William A. Vanderveer and Dr. Ross, both of whom live across the street, after his return home from Rondout on the day of the murder.

The jury passed out of the kitchen into the hallway, thence upstairs to the rear bed room where Mrs. Van Aken's body was found, and into the front bed room, emerging from there into the hall and coming down stairs again. Each room was indicated by Judge Jenkins.

Barn Completes the Inspection.

Assembled once more in front of the house, the jury was taken though the yard to the barn, whose doors were opened by George Van Aken. They passed into the barn from the door opening into the Van Aken yard, and passed out through the door opening on Stout avenue, from which Edwin Van Aken drove when he started for Rondout on the day of his wife's murder. There they posed again before the camera and entered their automobile, which pased through Green street, Main street, Salem street, Hasbrouck avenue, past James Rodman's house, and so to Broadway and to the ferry, covering the precise route taken by Edwin Van Aken after he left the barn to drive to Rondout the day of the murder. They reached the ferry at 11:45 o'clock and were at the court house again at noon. As soon as Van Aken arrived court reconvened and adjourned until two o'clock in the afternoon, when the trial was resumed.

Immediately after the opening of court at ten o'clock and before the jury started on its trip, Corporation Counsel William D. Brinnier announced that William A. Vanderveer was anxious to go on a trip. He had been subpoenaed by the defense but desired to be sworn out of order in order to leave home as soon as possible. District Attorney Cunningham consented to Mr. Vanderveer's examination at that time.

Mr. Vanderveer testified his family and the Edwin Van Aken family had been intimate for several years and had gone on automobile trips together through Connecticut and to Great Barrington, Mass., and the two families had spent two weeks together at Asbury Park, N. J., last summer. Some of the automobile trips had been taken last fall.

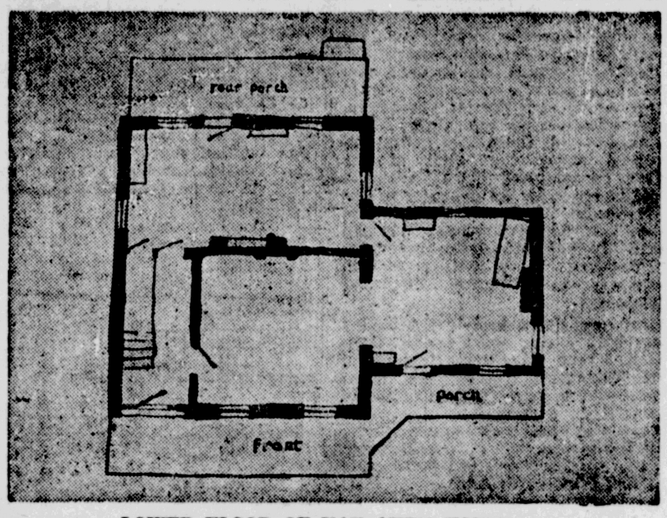
He had heard people speak of Edwin Van Aken, he said, and from the speech of people Edwin Van Aken's reputation for peace and quiet in the community where he lived was good.

Had Seen Van Aken Drunk.

Cross-examination by Mr. Cunningham:

Q—"You had heard he was addicted to drinking?"

A—"I heard he drank, yes."



LOWER FLOOR OF VAN AKEN HOUSE.

Q—"You heard he drank practically every day, didn't you?"

A—"No, not every day."

Q—"Well, several times a week?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"He had that reputation, according to the speech of people in Port Ewen, for many months, didn't he?"

A—"I don't want to swear to anything I don't know."

Question repeated.

A—"I can't answer that."

Question repeated.

A—"I heard of him being intoxicated."

Q—"Wasn't his general reputation that of a man addicted to getting drunk several times a week and hadn't it been such for many months?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"Didn't you hear rumors that his attitude toward his wife was not quiet and peaceable?"

A—"No."

Q—"Did you hear of his breaking dishes in the house or locking his wife out of the house?"

A—"No."

Re-direct examination.

Q—"Did you ever see him drunk in his life?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"How often?"

A—"Quite often."

Q—"But did you ever see him ugly?"

A—"No."

Q—"Did you ever see or hear of his fighting or quarreling with anyone?"

A—"No."

Q—"Or with his wife?"

A—"No."

CONNELLY INJUNCTION.

Application Made to Vacate Orders Granted Some Time Ago.

Application was made to Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday to vacate injunction orders granted some time ago restraining Arthur C. Connelly and Dr. W. H. Connelly, as executors under the will of the late Hon. Henry C. Connelly, from disposing of any interest owned by Fred D. Connelly in the estate of his father.

The injunction orders were obtained by J. Arnold Wood of Poughkeepsie after he had obtained judgment against Fred D. Connelly in the supreme court in Poughkeepsie for $15,000 for alienation of his wife's affections.

Arthur C. Connelly, who appeared on behalf of the motion to vacate the injunction orders, said the executors were practically restrained from transacting any business connected with the estate. Two orders had been granted; one for the examination of the executors and the other appointing a receiver of Fred D. Connelly. The judgment debtor had given assignments of his interest amounting to $7,500 which had been filed with the executors, and these assignments practically wiped out his interest. It was necessary for the executors to carry out certain business transactions relating to the estate, but they were estopped from doing so under the restraining orders.

Counsel for Mr. Wood said the same motion had been made twice before Judge Tompkins in Rockland county and each time the motion had been denied. The last time it was denied was on May 22. He had been unable to complete his examination of the executors, who according to their own statements had already transferred $40,000 to the legatees under the will. He was unable to determine from Mr. Connelly's testimony how much money belonging to the estate was in different banks. Three years ago the taxable transfer appraiser's report showed that Fred D. Connely's interest was $16,000, but Mr. Connelly now said his brother's interest amounted only to $10,000.

Mr. Connelly in reply said the first motion to vacate the injunction had been made returnable before Judge Tompkins at Nyack. He had left Kingston on the first ferry and reached Nyack at 10:20 o'clock to find that his adversary had taken advantage of his lateness to have him adjudged in default so that the motion was not determined on the merits. The second motion had been adjourned for one month in order that the examination of the executors before a referee might be completed. Personally he had appeared before a referee three times. On the third occasion opposing counsel was not ready to proceed. He had understood that the matter before Judge Tompkins had been adjourned to the last Saturday of the month instead of the fourth Saturday and this explained his failure to appear then. He had furnished a complete statement of the inventory, etc., of the estate except a statement of what banks contained deposits of the estate and the amount of such deposits, and he did not believe it was necessary to submit that statement.

Wood's counsel said he was willing to submit the referee's report regarding Mr. Connelly's behavior at the last hearing and his refusal to submit to examination before the referee, but Judge Hasbrouck said the referee's report was not necessary.

Judge Hasbrouck took the papers and reserved decision.

HIGHLAND ROAD AGAIN TIED UP

Work on the Highland-Highland Landing state road is tied up because William Atkins, who lives along the road, claims to be the owner of land included within the bounds of the highway as mapped out by the state engineers and has procured an injunction restraining Contractor Neile Harper from proceeding with the work.

The survey for the Highland road was made several years ago by engineers connected with the state highway department, and on the maps certified to the board of supervisors, the supervisors' committee purchased some of the rights of way necessary to be acquired and condemned others.

Mr. Atkins's property borders on the Highland road and he claims also to have an interest in part of the highway. A retaining wall was built in front of his property after construction work was commenced in order to prevent it from sliding into the brook which flows alongside the roadway for some distance. He paid $600 for his entire property and seeks to recover $600 for his interest in the highway. Andrew Wright Lent of Highland is his attorney.

The Highland--Highland Landing road has had numerous obstructions in its progress and work has not proceeded as rapidly as many Highland people have wished.

The work will remain tied up as long as the Atkins injunction remains in force. When the improvement of the Highland--Highland Landing road was proposed, a committee of Highland residents appeared before the board of supervisers, in March, 1912, to urge the adoption of the necessary resolutions. The spokesman for the Highland residents was A. D. Lent, who said that the town of Lloyd would bear the brunt of the cost.

ALBANY AVENUE ROADWAY.

Topdressing Made Oiling a Failure, This Correspondent Says.

To the Superintendent of Streets, also His Honor, the Mayor, likewise the Honorable Board of Aldermen of the City of Kingston, N. Y., through the courtesy of the Editor of the Kingston Daily Freeman.

Albany avenue has been oiled and topdressed with crushed soft lime stone, which latter substance has been speedily transformed into the finest dust, so that not only is the air dust-laden through the constant agitation caused by heavy and speedy traffic, but side walks, lawns, porches and the interior of houses are dust-laden, and, yea verily, the internal works of the passing and resident human are struggling to overcome the harmful effects of this continuous sand storm.

Was this intended? Or if a mistake was made in the manner of oiling first then adding a dust producing topdressing, ought not the mistake to be corrected as speedily as possible? A tuberculosis camp is an excellent thing, but why should a city like our beautiful Kingston go into the business of furnishing patients by creating a medium for introducing germ laden dust (which same dust is of so irritating a nature as to cause serious injury to throats and lungs) into the system of its citizens? Which last thought reminds me that I should have included the "Board of Health" to the other honorables addressed, since they should take official cognizance of the last mentioned phase.

Seriously, gentlemen, a public nuisance has been officially created—a condition detrimental to public health is being maintained; distress and ill health are being produced as long as the mistake (for such I believe it to have been and not ignorant bungling) shall go uncorrected.

Now go to! Oil the avenue, lay the dust, preserve both the roadway (ere it be blown away), and the health of our citizens, ere they be driven away—and "do it now."

With many thanks to ye editor, the many honorables above mentioned, and the gentle reader, permit me to sign myself, as you doubtless expect me to do, as "An Old Subscriber," which is the established form for grumblers.

Collision Near Post Office.

Charles Shultis, a clerk in the dry goods store of S. E. Eighmey on lower Broadway, had a narrow escape from serious injury on Monday evening when the bicycle he was riding collided with an automobile. The collision occurred near the central post office. Shultis was coming out of Grand street and the automobile and bicycle collided. The bicycle was wrecked and Shultis was hurled off, escaping with a bad shaking up and bruises about the body. Who was driving the automobile could not be learned.

Cox Would be Governor.

Announcement has been made by the Oswego Times that Mayor R. M. Cox of Middletown is seeking the Democratic nomination for governor. He is president of the state mayors' conference and recently visited Kingston where he made an address on the work of the association.

THE COMING NUT.

Interest in the commercial growing of nuts is increasing rapidly. The pecan and the English walnut hold the lead in popularity in spite of some failures and misdirected efforts in handling these crops. Agricultural colleges are answering the demand for investigations in nut culture. The Pennsylvania experiment station has called for information about English walnuts now growing in the state that may be of value. In California, Oregon and some southern states nut investigations have been under way for several years and are beginning to bring worth while results.

There is opportunity to improve even the common black walnut. Improvement of nuts is slower than improvement of the commercial orchard fruits. It is a task for those who are well established in farming and are able to make tests covering a period of years. The importance and economy of nut production have frequently been urged in these columns. Those who are interested in permanent agriculture have a great opportunity to participate in the development of an industry that now gives promise of rapid growth.—Country Gentleman.

CHESTNUT BARK DISEASE.

A Quarantine Proposed In Order to Check the Pest.

The chestnut bark disease has become so serious that in the opinion of the United States department of agriculture it is desirable to quarantine New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, North Carolina, Iowa and Nebraska or such portions thereof as may be found to be essential. The proposed quarantine will restrict the movement from the territory named of chestnut nursery stock and chestnut lumber with the bark on.

The chestnut bark disease is comparatively recent in this country. Its origin is not absolutely known, but it is believed that it was brought in indirectly from China, where it exists also. In 1908 it was found widely distributed in the Hudson river valley and in the vicinity of New York city. It is caused by a fungus which rapidly kills the native chestnut trees and is spread chiefly by the distribution of nursery stock. Once it has been established, however, it is spread locally by wind, birds and insects. Migratory birds may also carry the disease for long distances.

Since this disease is proving fatal to the native chestnuts in the infected area it is quite probable that their place may be taken by chestnut orchards grown for the nuts in areas which have not yet been infected and from which it is hoped that the proposed quarantine will keep out the infection. At present the native chestnut grows in practically all of the territory east of the Mississippi except a section of the coastal plain of the southern states, the northern half of Maine and parts of Illinois and Michigan. For two years after the tree has been killed by the fungus the timber remains valuable, but deterioration sets in after that time.

Homemade Potato Cutter.

A writer in the Farming Business describes a device for cutting seed potatoes as follows:

All that is required is to fasten a one inch board six inches wide, planed on the upper side, to the top of a barrel or box, holding it on tightly by two deep cleats. A long, sharp, thin bladed knife is fixed through the board in a slanting position. To cut take the potato in both hands and push it lengthwise over the knife, dropping the sets into the barrel or box. Should the sets be too large the juice of the potato will cause the two parts to stick together, and they can then be cut either lengthwise or crosswise, as desired.

Apparatus For Spraying.

For all sprays, when used on any considerable number of trees, some form of spraying apparatus will be necessary. A bucket pump or a knapsack pump, however, will be sufficient for low trees, ornamental hedges, etc. For orchards of some size a barrel pump will do more effective work, and for large commercial orchards a gasoline outfit may be desirable. Where only a tree or two are to be treated it is perfectly practicable to apply the wash on the limbs and branches with a brush. In such cases fish oil soap employed at the rate of two pounds to a gallon of water is an excellent insecticide.

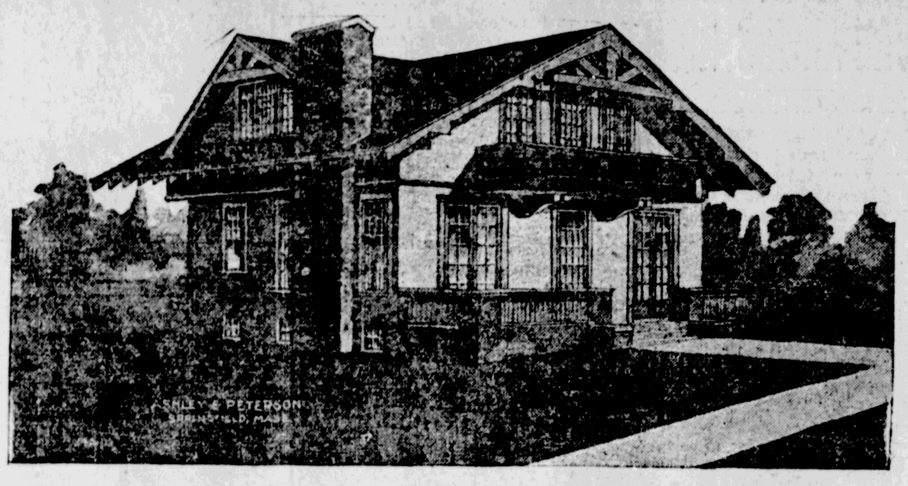
A Rare Bird.

The 200 egg per year hen is almost as scarce in this country as the hen with teeth.

Take It as It Is.

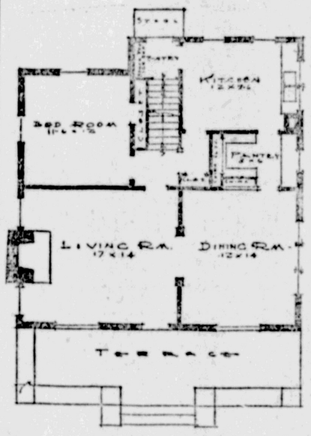
Thou must content thyself to see the world imperfect as it is. Thou wilt never have any quiet if thou vexest thyself because thou canst not bring mankind to that exact notion of things and rule of life which thou hast formed in thy own mind.—Fuller.

A Square Cottage of Seven Rooms. No. 131



Here is a cottage which, while handsome and dignified in appearance, owes nothing whatever to any frills, fads or fancies. Its charm is due to the simplest accessories, as a little examination will show—to the terrace of field stone with balustrade, the massive exposed field stone chimney with cast stone cap, the shallow pitched overhanging roof with rafters, and the ornamental trusses at the peak of the gables, the harmonious combination of stucco and shingles, the large balcony, supported by brackets, on the second story, and the liberal use of group and French windows.

The terrace is in reality a roofless piazza. With a southern or western exposure it would probably be advisable to use awnings to temper the rays of the summer sun, but there is nothing to obstruct the light and air so essential to a healthy home. Flower boxes on terrace and balcony will add a distinctly charming touch.



1ST FLOOR PLAN

The main entrance gives directly upon the living-room, 16.9x14.6 feet. French windows open out upon the terrace not only from the living-room but from the dining-room as well. Opposite the fireplace in the living-room, which has a handsome mantel and stone hearth, wide double doors, or an archway if preferred, communicate with the dining-room, 12.3x14.6 feet, these two rooms extending across the front of the house. A group of three windows is directly opposite the doorway in the dining-room, while a china closet faces the French window in the front. In fact one of the predominant features of this house is the symmetry and balance displayed throughout.

Swinging doors lead to the pantry from both dining room and kitchen, 12.3x9.6 feet. A glance at the plan will demonstrate that the same keynote of balance obtains even in the pantry. A door from the kitchen leads to the back entry, where, just inside the rear door, is space for the refrigerator, and beside this are the basement stairs. Another door from the kitchen opens into a hallway, accessible also from the living-room. Here are a clothes closet, the stairs to the second story, and, directly back of the living-room, a bedroom, 11.6x12 feet, with a good sized closet. This bedroom is so located with reference to the other rooms on the ground floor, that while easily accessible, it is as completely isolated, as are the chambers above.

From a well-lighted central hall on the second floor open the bathroom, a linen closet, three bedrooms, and a sleeping porch, 9x7 feet, in the opinion of many, more desirable than a closed chamber can possibly be. These latter are respectively 9.9x12.6, 13.10x10, and 13x9.6 feet. All are provided with extra large closets, and in addition a storeroom, 8x10.6 feet, opens from the first named. Each bedroom has group windows and swinging casements. A balcony above the terrace at the front of the house is reached from the largest bedroom by a central door flanked by French windows, forming a combination impossible to excel for genuine comfort during the heated term.

BEAUTIFUL "FATAL COUNTESS" WHO HAS WON PARDON AFTER LOVE MURDER.

The picture shows Countess Marie Tarnovska.

Milan, June 7.—Countess Marie Tarnovska, sentenced May 1910, to eight years' imprisonment for complicity in the murder of Count Kamarowsky at Venice November, 1908, has been pardoned and released.

Aristocratic Europe and even the United States showed wide concern in the 100 days' trial of the countess, who was known as the most unprincipled and most beautiful adventuress of the continental capitals. The woman's extraordinary beauty fascinated her victims and made them her prey. She was convicted of getting the weakling Naumoff to make the trip from Vienna to Venice to shoot the aged count, who had been ensnared in the toils of the beautiful adventuress and whose life was heavily insured.

The woman's life story is morbid. For her favors at least six men of wealth and position lost name, fortune and even life. Two were murdered; one tried to end his life. Four dupes abandoned their wives and children to follow her through Europe. Two confessed to doing murder at her order.

The countess is the daughter of Count ORurik, descendant of an Irish soldier of fortune who settled in Russia. She is thirty-six years old and was born in Kieff in 1879. When seventeen she fled from school and eloped with Count Tarnovsky.

Kill the Winter Fly; Do Your Swatting Now; Don't Delay

Do your fly swatting early. That's the way Miss Jean Dawson, director of the Cleveland anti-fly campaign, modified the familiar slogan to accomplish such miraculous results for her city. To kill one winter fly is better than to kill a million later in the summer, according to Miss Dawson, and her work in Cleveland proves that she knows what she is talking about.

No matter if it is still cold weather and only one fly has been brave enough to show itself, the time to start the war against the flies is now. Those that live through the winter are few, and that's just the reason efforts made now can be so effective. Perhaps there are many people who have not seen a fly yet this year, but there are flies and plenty of them, as the millions will prove later unless the few are destroyed.

When Dr. Dawson—for this woman anti-fly general can write a Ph. D. after her name as professor of civic biology at the Cleveland Normal school—began talking about swatting the fly the people of Cleveland thought her remarks were a little unseasonable.

"We can't find any flies," they said.

Dr. Dawson told them to look in the cracks and crevices of their attics and basements and stables and sheds. They looked. There were a few flies.

"But why trouble ourselves about a few half dead insects?" they objected.

Then came Miss Dawson's astounding figures in proof of her plan. The children and grandchildren and later descendants of a pair of flies breeding from early spring to late fall can be numbered only by using a string of twenty-one digits, she said. The number she gave was 191,010 quadrillion flies, enough to cover the entire earth forty-seven feet deep. Of course the flies, like human beings, are troubled with a high death rate, especially of infants, and no mother fly has ever been able to have all her eggs hatch into flies, which in turn reared unbroken families.

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

DON'T eliminate beefsteak from your menu just because you have neither a gas, electric nor coal range. You can fry a steak on that little gas stove you bought for 10 cents if you only know how, and it would take a well qualified expert to tell the difference.

First have your pan red hot and drop in a piece of suet about the size of a hickory nut. Take your steak, a sirloin or porterhouse, at least one and one-half inches thick—two inches thick is better—let it remain three minutes first on one side, then on the other, for searing. This is to keep the juices in. Keep turning the steak constantly at intervals of three to five minutes until done—rare, medium or well—as desired, and the result will be twin brother to broiled steak.

Another way to fry steak is to sear it three minutes on each side, then place a cover on the pan and let it cook slowly seven minutes more on each side, when it is medium.

Of course there is nothing like broiling for the best flavor, and there is nothing to equal the coal or wood fire for this purpose. The secret is a glowing red heat. The housewife with a wood fire, if she will take the trouble to turn the wood nearly to the center, check the draft until the fire forms charcoal, will be repaid with a dainty meal.

The average housewife, however, finds the gas oven an ideal instrument for broiling. The oven should be hot when the steak is placed within, so it is well to light the gas in the oven about five minutes before the steak is ready and when the broiler is hot put the steak on it as near the gas flame as possible without letting it touch. Sear on each side from one to two minutes, turning it with a fork inserted as near the edge as possible. When the searing is completed turn the steak again, lower the pan about six inches and turn the burners halfway down so that the steak may broil slowly on each side about five minutes. This will give you a rare steak. It is sometimes well to give the steak a little more time and turn it oftener, never allowing it to broil on one side longer than four or five minutes. When frying a steak in an ordinary pan remember to stick the fork always near the bone in turning. The fried steak requires about twenty minutes.

BRIDE'S SHOWER.

How to Plan an Entertainment In Which Pins Are Used.

The invitations for this unusual shower were written on a correspondence card, on which a little gilt paper heart was pinned. Pins of every description were brought by the guests; there were papers and cubes of pins, pin balls, cushions filled with pins, bar, veil, collar and cuff pins. Safety pins in black and white were there, and papers of gilt and pearl pins for fastening the wedding veil. The following old rime, changed to suit the occasion, was written on the bride's place card:

No needles, but pins,
No needles, but pins,
For when a girl marries
Her happiness begins.

At each plate there was a bouquet of dainty spring flowers with a fancy pin thrust through the gauze bow that tied them. It is astonishing how many novel and useful pins and receptacles there may be devised for such a shower.

The hostess gave a leather velvet lined scarfpin case which the little bride to be said she knew "he" would appropriate.

There was a shirt waist set consisting of four little velvet bows, each one attached to a safety pin and all easy to attach to a lace jabot or the front of a shirt waist.

How to Make a Pretty Cover For Hot Biscuits.

Any hostess who prides herself on her delicious biscuits should not fail to keep them tasty by having them covered during the meal, so that they will retain the heat. An attractive cover can be made of white linen having a square center and four pointed ends. Once of the pointed pieces two biscuits might be embroidered. To make the design more realistic you can tint the biscuits brown and then outline the edges of them, or, in place of using the design, embroider the words "Hot Biscuits" on the linen. Have such a cover ready for the next plate of hot biscuits you serve to your friends and enjoy the praise you will receive for your needlework and your culinary ability.

How to Orientalize a White Silk Faille Suit.

One of the prettiest ideas in linings seen for months is that which gives to a suit of white silk faille a Chinese atmospere. The coat is so made that it may be worn open without having a slovenly appearance, and so the pretty lining peeps out and captivates all who spy it. The lining is a soft, heavy wash silk of white ground, with the famous "willow" plate pattern upon it in Chinese blue. One has to see it to realize the charming effect obtained. No note of blue appears otherwise upon the suit.

ARTICLE 15-A.

Section 230. Definition of explosives.
231. General regulations.
232. Explosives kept in suitable containers.
233. Magazines.
234. Caps not kept in magazine.
235. Reports.

239-a. Penalties.

§ 230. Definition of explosives. As used in this article,

1. The term "explosive" or "explosives," means and includes any chemical compound or any mechanical mixture that contains any oxidizing and combustible units, or other ingredients, in such proportions, quantities or packing that an ignition by fire, by friction, by concussion, by percussion or by detonator, of any part of the compound or mixture may cause such a sudden generation of highly heated gases that the resultant gaseous pressures are capable of producing destructive effects to contiguous objects or of destroying life or limb, but not including colloided nitro-cellulose in sheets or rods or grains not under one-eighth of an inch in diameter, wet nitro-cellulose containing twenty per centum or more moisture and wet nitro starch containing twenty per centum or more moisture and wet picric acid containing or being in ten per centum or more moisture. For the purposes of this article manufactured articles shall not be held to be explosives when the individual units contain explosives in such limited quantity, of such nature, or in such packing, that it is impossible to produce a simultaneous or a destructive explosion of such units, to the injury of life, limb or property by fire, by friction, by concussion, by percussion or by detonator, such as fixed ammunition for small arms, fire-crackers, safety fuse, matches, et cetera.

2. The term "highway" means and includes any public street or public highway, and the term "railway" means and includes any public steam, electric or other railroad.

3. The term "building" whenever used in sections two hundred and thirty to two hundred and thirty-seven, inclusive, means and includes only any building regularly occupied in whole or in part as a habitation for human beings, and any church, schoolhouse, railway station or other building where people are accustomed to assemble, but not including the buildings of a manufacturing plant where the business of manufacturing explosives is carried on.

4. The term "person" means and includes corporations and joint-stock associations, as well as natural persons.

5. The term "factory building" means any building or other structure containing explosives, in which the manufacture of explosives or any part of the manufacture is carried on.

6. The term "magazine" means and includes any building or other structure used to store explosives.

7. The term "efficient artificial barricade" means an artificial mound or properly revetted wall of earth of a minimum thickness of not less than three feet.

§ 231. General regulations. No person shall manufacture, have, keep or store explosives except in compliance with this article. The quantity of explosives that may be lawfully had, kept or stored in any factory building or magazine shall depend upon the distance that such factory building or magazine is situated from buildings, railways or highways, and the protection offered by natural or efficient artificial barricades to such buildings, railways or highways. Whenever any of the quantities given in column one of the quantity and distance table hereinafter set forth is had, kept or stored in any factory building or magazine in this state, the distance that any quantity given in column one of such table may be lawfully had, kept or stored from buildings, is the distance set opposite such quantity in column two of such table, and the distance that any quantity given in column one of such table may be lawfully had, kept or stored from railways, is the distance set opposite such quantity in column three of such table, and the distance that any quantity given in column one of such table may be lawfully had, kept or stored from highways, is the distance set opposite such quantity in column four of such table. The quantity and distance table governing the making, keeping or storing of explosives is as follows:

No quantity in excess of three hundred thousand pounds shall be had, kept or stored in any factory building or magazine in this state. Whenever the building, railway or highway to be protected is effectually screened from the factory building or magazine, where explosives are had, kept or stored, either by natural features of the ground, or by an efficient artificial barricade of such height that any straight line drawn from the top of any side wall of the factory building or magazine, to any part of the building to be protected will pass through such intervening natural or efficient artificial barricade, and any straight line drawn from the top of any side wall of the factory building or magazine to any point twelve feet above the center of the railway or highway to be protected will pass through such intervening natural or efficient artificial barricade, the applicable distance given in columns two, three and four of the quantity and distance table may be reduced one-half.

§ 232. Explosives kept in suitable containers. Except only at a factory building no person shall have, keep or store explosives at any place within this state unless such explosives are completely enclosed and encased in tight metal, wooden or fibre containers, and, except while being transported or in the custody of a common carrier awaiting shipment or pending delivery to a consignee, shall be kept and stored in a magazine constructed and operated as provided in section two hundred and thirty-three of this article, and no person having explosives in his possession or control shall, under any circumstances, permit or allow any grains or particles to be or remain on the outside or about the containers in which such explosives are held. All containers in which explosives are held shall be plainly marked with the name of the explosives contained therein.

§ 233. Magazines. Magazines in which explosives may lawfully be kept or stored shall be of two classes, as follows:

(a) Magazines of the first class shall consist of those containing explosives exceeding fifty pounds, and shall be constructed of brick, concrete, iron or wood covered with iron, and shall have no openings except for ventilation and entrance. The doors of such magazine must at all times be kept closed and locked, except when necessarily opened for the purpose of storing or removing explosives therein or therefrom, by persons lawfully entitled to enter the same. Every such magazine shall have sufficient openings for ventilation thereof, which must be screened in such manner as to prevent the entrance of sparks of fire through the same. Upon each side and each end of such magazine, or upon its barricade, there shall at all times be kept conspicuously posted a sign, with words "Magazine—Explosives—Dangerous" legibly printed thereon in letters not less than six inches high. No matches or fire of any kind shall at any time be permitted in any such magazine. No package of explosives shall at any time be opened in or within fifty feet of any magazine, nor shall any open package of explosives be kept therein. Magazines in which more than fifty pounds of explosives are kept and stored must be detached, and those where more than five thousand pounds are kept and stored must be located at least two hundred feet from any other magazine.

(b) Magazines of the second class shall be made of fireproof material, or wood covered with sheet iron, and not more than fifty pounds of explosives shall at any time be kept or stored therein, and, except when necessarily opened for use by authorized persons, shall at all times be kept securely locked. Upon each such magazine there shall at all times be kept conspicuously posted a sign, with words "Magazine—Explosives—Dangerous" legibly printed thereon, and not more than two such magazines shall be had or kept in any building.

§ 234. Caps not kept in magazine. No blasting caps, or other detonating or fulminating caps or detonators, shall be kept or stored in any magazine in which explosives are kept or stored.

§ 235. Reports. All persons engaged in keeping or storing explosives, who shall not have heretofore made a report to the state fire marshal as required by section three hundred and sixty-three of the insurance law, now repealed, and all persons engaging in keeping or storing explosives after the provisions of this section take effect shall, before engaging in the keeping or storing of explosives, make a report to the commissioner of labor on blanks to be furnished by him stating:

1. The location of the magazine, if then existing, or in case of a new magazine, the proposed location of such magazine.

2. The kind of explosives that are kept or stored or intended to be kept or stored and the maximum quantity that is intended to be kept or stored thereat.

3. The distance that such magazine is located or intended to be located from the nearest buildings and highways.

The commissioner of labor shall, as soon as may be after receiving such report, cause an inspection to be made of the magazine, if then constructed, and in the case of a new magazine, as soon as may be after same is constructed. If upon such inspection the magazine is found to be constructed in accordance with the specifications provided in section two hundred and thirty-three of this article the commissioner of labor shall determine the amount of explosives that may be kept or stored in such magazine by reference to the quantity and distance table set forth in section two hundred and thirty-one of this article, and shall issue a certificate to the person applying therefor, showing compliance with the provisions of this article, which certificate shall set forth the maximum quantity of explosives that may be had, kept or stored in said magazine. Such certificate of compliance shall be valid until cancelled for cause as hereinafter provided. Whenever by reason of change in the physical conditions surrounding said magazine at the time of the issuance of the certificate of compliance therefor, such as the erection of buildings nearer said magazine or the operation of railways, or the opening of highways, the commissioner of labor shall modify or cancel such certificate in accordance with the changed conditions. Whenever any person to whom a certificate of compliance has been issued by the state fire marshal or commissioner of labor keeps or stores in the magazine covered by such certificate of compliance any quantity of explosives in excess of the maximum amount set forth in such certificate of compliance issued therefor, or whenever any person fails for thirty days to pay the annual license fee hereinafter provided after the same becomes due, the commissioner of labor is authorized to cancel such certificate of compliance and to order the removal of all explosives stored in said magazine.

Every person engaging in the keeping or storing of explosives shall pay an annual license fee for each magazine maintained, to be graduated by the commissioner of labor according to the quantity kept or stored therein, of not less than five dollars nor more than twenty-five dollars. Said license fee shall be payable in advance to the commissioner of labor and by him paid to the state treasurer.

§ 236. Transportation. MEDICAL EXPERTS FIX TIME OF WOMAN'S DEATH

Basing Their Opinion on State of Body When Examined by Dr. Ross They Say Mrs. Van Aken Died Before 11 o'clock.

According to his own story told to witnesses at the time his wife's body was discovered after her murder at Port Ewen on October 22, last, Edwin Van Aken had left his house for Rondout between 11:15 and 11:45 o'clock on the morning of the tragedy. Medical experts testified in county court Monday afternoon that in their opinion Mrs. Van Aken had been dead since before eleven o'clock that morning.

The doctors based their opinion on the conditions of rigidity of the muscles after the body was discovered, as described by Dr. George W. Ross of Port Ewen, and others, earlier in the trial, and upon their experience with rigor mortis, or the rigor following death.

That death was due to strangulation was also the opinion of the doctors, who based this opinion on the condition in which the brain was shown to be at the time of the autopsy at four o'clock that afternoon, and from marks on either side of the wind pipe which in the opinion of one of the doctors were such as could have been made by finger nails.

The opinions of the doctors were given in answer to a hypothetical question asked of them by District Attorney Cunningham, embodying a summary if practically all of the testimony previously given during the trial in regard to Mrs. Van Aken's condition when her body was found and as disclosed by the autopsy.

Dr. Ross Re-called.

Dr. George W. Ross of Port Ewen was re-called by the prosecution as the first witness after the noon recess. He said he had not taken any clothing from the Van Aken home but had been present when it was delivered to the district attorney. The bag of bloody clothing whose various articles had been marked for identification last Friday was identified by Dr. Ross and the various pieces were introduced in evidence.

Dr. Ross said he had know Mrs. Van Aken ten years, and she was about fifty years old. The autopsy had shown she was was five feet and three inches in height and weighed 125 pounds. The temperature in the room when he was called in was about 65 degrees.

Wounds Found on Neck.

Describing the condition of the body, he said Mrs. Van Aken's tongue was swollen and protruded between the teeth and lips. The lips had become blue and were swollen. The head wounds as described on his earlier examination were again described. There were two small wounds over the left eye. There also had been a contused wound on top of the head. At the left of the larynx, or wind pipe, were two small curved wounds, about an inch apart.

Rigid Condition of Body.

Mrs. Van Aken's jaw was rigid when he made his first examination, and her mouth could not be opened. The skin of her face and neck was dark blue; the eyelids were partly open, the eyeballs protruded.

The upper extremities were rigid and one hand was shut tight and the arm drawn up over the face. Her knees were drawn up and the ankles and knees both were rigid, but not the hips, which were not cold like the extremities but showed warmth.

Her hair was matted with blood and a piece of blood-stained white sheeting had been wrapped around her head. On the linoleum under her head the blood had dried except in one place where there was some blood still moist.

Entirely Rigid at 4 p. m.

The autopsy was performed at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the body was entirely rigid. There were bruises on the left leg near the knee, on the left hip, right arm and right elbow.

Removal of the scalp showed there had been a hemorrhage in the scalp. When the skull cap was removed about half an inch of fluid was found directly under the place where the blow on the top of the head had been struck. The brain mass was not lacerated and the skull was not fractured.

The lungs were partly congested but contained a slight amount of air. The heart was normal except that there was an excess of fat below the left auricle. The stomach was empty, the intestines contained gas and a slight quantity of liquid. The liver and kidneys were normal except the gall bladder, which contained six gall stones.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brinnier, Dr. Ross said he had incorrectly stated on his former examination that there were only two cuts over the eye.

Washed His Hands at Pump.

When he had finished his examination of Mrs. Van Awen, Dr. Ross had washed his hands at the pump, pumping the water himself. There was some blood on his hands. In his opinion a woman struck on the head as Mrs. Van Aken had been would struggle and she could have received the bruises on her arm and hips from moving or struggling around the floor. The doctor was not sure whether Edwin Van Aken had washed his hands at the sink but was positive he had not helped in lifting Mrs. Van Aken's head from the floor or that he had gone down stairs when the doctor went down to wash his hands.

Examined Desk With Unwashed Hands.

Before he had washed his hands, Dr. Ross helped Van Aken examine the desk and there was blood on his hands at that time. He had not used any cloths on which to wipe his hands before washing them.

Dr. E. E. Norwood of this city, who assisted Dr. Ross in performing the autopsy, corroborated Dr. Ross as to the conditions disclosed, the rigidity of the body, the location of the wounds, bruises, etc.

Finger Nails and Strangulation.

The curved wounds on the neck were such as could have been made by finger nails.

In Dr. Norwood's opinion, death was caused by strangulaltion, and the wounds on the top of the head were a contributing cause.

Upon Mr. Brinnier's cross-examination, Dr. Norwood said he had heard of gall stones contributing to cause death. The heart did not show signs of fatty degeneration, although there was an abnormal amount of fat on one side of the heart. The autopsy was performed in the back room upstairs (the room in which the body was found), and water was brought there in a pitcher. The doctors had worn rubber gloves while performing the autopsy and afterwards washed their hands at the pump in the kitchen.

On re-direct examination, Dr. Norwood said Mrs. Van Aken had an abnormal amount around the right auricle of the heart. Mrs. Van Aken did not suffer from fatty degeneration, which is the change of muscle tissue into fat.

Medical Expert from New York.

Dr. Otto H. Shultze of No. 47 East Fifty-eighth street, New York city, was the next and most important witness of the day. Since April 26 of this year he had been medical examiner for the district attorney of New York county, a position which was created by a law passed by the last legislature. Prior to that time for many years he was coroner's physician in New York and over 5,000 cases had come under his observation.

When death occurs, said Dr. Shultze, respiration and the heart action both cease. The blood remains fluid for a time. Immediately after death there is a complete relaxation of the muscles which after a varying period begin to get rigid, due to coagulation of certain elements of the blood.

When the Death Rigor Begins.

This rigidity, or rigor mortis as it is called, meaning death rigor, begins usually about the face, then extends to the neck, next affects the upper extremities, then the trunk and lower extremities. Exceptionally it begins in the face and affects the lower extremities, and sometimes begins in the face and affects one entire side of the body before the other side of the body is affected.

In from six to nine hours usually the body is completely rigid.

The exposed parts of the body usually grow cold first; the abdomen and sides of the chest being the last parts of the body to lose their temperature.

The stiffness of the body which has become complete in from six to nine hours after death lasts in a varying period of from one to three days. Following that, from the effect of decomposition of the blood, from exposure to the air and from various germs the skin changes to a green color.

Dr. Shultze said he had observed the progress of rigor mortis from its inception and in cases where death had resulted from strangulation.

Can Tell Time of Death.

Q.—"Is it possible, from knowing the condition of the body within from two to four hours after death, and knowing the temperature of the room and other conditions, to tell positively the time of death?"

A.—"It is."

A hypothetical question was then put to Dr. Shultze by District Attorney Cunningham. The question itself covered several typewritten pages and required five minutes to read. It included the condition disclosed by the autopsy as testified to by Dr. Ross and Dr. Norwood, in minute detail, and the general appearance of Mrs. Van Aken's body as testified to by Dr. Ross and other witnesses. The question assumed that the body was found at 2:10 p. m.

From these conditions as described in the hypothetical question, Dr. Schultze was asked if he could form an opinion as to the cause of death. He said he could.

Reasons for Strangulation Opinion.

Q.—"What was the cause of death of this woman?"

A.—"The immediate cause of death was strangulation, and the wounds on the top of the head show it was a case of assault."

Enlarging on his answer, Dr. Shultze said strangulation was shown by the blood condition of the head, by the dark color of the lips, their swollen condition, the protruding tongue and eyes and by the marks on the side of the larynx. In addition, the wounds on top of the head had caused a hemorrhage and may or may not have caused concussion of the brain.

What the Brain Indicated.

The position of the two wounds on either side of the wind pipe directly over the large vein which carries the blood from the brain to the trunk, indicated that the veins of the brain and head would be distended, and the finding of a half ounce of fluid blood between the top of the skull and the brain tissue was an indication that the vessels of the brain and head had been distended, which condition could have been produced only by a compression of the large vein referred to which brings the blood from the brain.

Death Occurred Before 11 a. m.

Q—"Are you able to form an opinion from this question as to the time of death of this woman?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"At what time of day did that woman die?"

A—"The statement is made that at 2:10 o'clock p. m. the jaw was so rigid that the mouth could not be opened. That is a condiliton where rigidity occurs in the third hour, except in exceptional cases of hemorrhage. The rigidity of the neck and legs indicates that she had been dead between three and four hours. Six hours is required for complete rigidity, which is hastened by hemorrhage. In my opinion it would have taken at least three hours for the rigidity described as existing at 2:10 p. m. to have occurred.

Q—"So that in your opinion that woman died at about what time?"

A—"Before eleven o'clock in the morning of that day."

Was Attacked by New York Newspapers.

Cross-examined by Mr. Brinnier, Dr. Shultze said he had been coroner's physician for Coroner Hubbel in New York city in 1896 and had continued to serve as coroner's physician under consecutive successive appointments until he resigned on April 26 of this year.

Q—"Now, doctor, wasn't your resignation due to the comments which had been made about you in the New York papers?"

A—"Exactly."

Q—"And it was because they attacked the coroners' physicians in New York that you resigned, didn't you?"

A—"I have already stated the reason why I resigned—to accept this appointment as medical examiner for the district attorney of New York county."

Mr. Brinnier—"That's all, sir."

District Attorney Cunningham took up at once the matter of Dr. Shultze's resignation as coroner's physician. The doctor said a movement was on foot in 1914 to abolish the office of coroner in New York and he had been active in behalf of the bill, but it died in the Assembly Cities' Committee. He had been marked for persecution by the newspapers and had had three trials.

Q—"Was comment directed against coroners or coroners' physicians?"

A—"Against both."

The doctor said he was tried by the coroners for disobeying a subordinate clerk, and the coroners had reversed the court of appeals. He had been the target for criticism because of his activity for the bill abolishing coroners and coroners' physicians. The coroners' physicians had been abolished and coroners would be abolished after January 1, 1918 He had resigned before his office was abolished in order to become medical examiner for District Attorney Perkins.

Bill Not Created For Him.

Re-cross examination:

Q—"This bill was passed to create a position for you, wasn't it?"

A—"The position was created and I was appointed to fill it."

Q—"And you are also the medical adviser of the district attorney of Ulster county, aren't you?"

Q—"No, I have been his adviser but I am now a witness."

Q—"How long were you his adviser?"

A—"Up to the moment I took this witness chair."

Chandler Says Death Was Before 11 A. M.

Dr. George Chandler of this city, the next witness, listened to the reading of the hypothetical question which had been put to Dr. Shultze and said death in such a case was due to stranguation and external violence. This was indicated by the fact that when her body was found her head was covered with blood, her tongue and eyeballs were protruding, and her throat bore two marks one on each side of the larynx. In his opinion she died before 11 a. m. on the day she was found.

Was Mrs. Van Aken Around at 11:30 A. M.?

Cross-examination:

Q—"If she was out and around at 11:30 o'clock that morning, she couldn't have been dead, could she?"

Objected to and objection sustained.

Q—"You have another profession, haven't you—that of professor of music?"

A—"I wish I was one"

Q—"But you have given exhibitions of music?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"And have been in the theatrical business?"

A—"Yes."

Knowledge Gained From Experience.

If a room where a dead body is placed is warm, a little longer time is required for rigor mortis to set in. He never had seen anyone choke to death while they were choking.

Q—"Then you never watched from the time rigor mortis set in, did you?"

A—"Yes; not here, but in New York."

Q—"Where death resulted from strangulation?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"But you had no knowledge of the time the offense had been committed, had you?"

A—"Yes, within five or ten minutes."

Q—"You didn't see it yourself, or know of your own knowledge"

A—"No, I was told when I reached there."

Strange Things On the Ambulance.

The case to which he referred, said Dr. Chandler, occurred West of Broadway, while he was in St. Vincent's Hospital.

Q—"Where was it on West Broadway?"

A—"I can't tell exactly."

Q—"Wasn't it such a strange thing then that you didn't pay attention to it?"

A—"O, I saw lots of strange things on the ambulance; I don't remember the place but I remember the case all right. That was twenty-four years ago."

Cases of rigidity were known within an hour where the patient had tetanus, or lockjaw.

Q—"You expect to get paid for giving your opinion here, don't you?"

A—"Yes."

Q—"How much?"

A—"I haven't the slightest idea yet."

Dr. Chandler took 1,093 ambulance calls while he was at St. Vincent's Hospital, after which he was at Bellevue Hospital.

Mrs. Van Aken Was Crying.

Mrs. Eliza Ellsworth, who has lived in Port Ewen all her life and belonged to the same church as Mrs. Van Aken, the murdered woman, told of calling at the Van Aken home two nights before the murder to get Mrs. Van Aken to go to the Ladies' Missionary Society meeting that evening. She knocked at the front door and when Mrs. Van Aken came to the door she was crying.

Mr. Brinnier objected to the witness stating whether Mrs. Van Aken was crying or not, but was overruled by the court.

It developed that Mrs. Ellsworth attended the missionary meeting alone that evening as Mrs. Van Aken did not go with her. While at the Van Aken home that evening, Edwin Van Aken stayed in the parlor and she did not see him.

"You women of the Ladies' Missionary Society cry often, don't you?" queried Mr. Brinnier as he arose to cross examine Mrs. Ellsworth.

The question was objected to by the district attorney and sustained.

Did Not Like Van Aken.

In reply to Mr. Brinnier's questions, Mrs. Ellsworth said she did not like Van Aken but could not tell how many years that feeling had existed.

"Did you want to marry Eddie Van Aken; is not that the cause of your dislike?" asked Mr. Brinnier.

"No, sir," replied Mrs. Ellsworth, vigorously, while those in the court room smiled.

Van Aken Locked Wife Out.

Mrs. Mollie Scott of Jersey city, a sister of the murdered woman, was the next witness. When she came to Ulster county last year she visited at the home of Mrs. Van Aken. The week before the murder the witness and her sister came to Kingston shopping. They returned to the Van Aken home about six o'clock that afternoon. Went to enter by front door but found it locked. Mrs. Van Aken knocked on the door and got no response and looking in the window saw Edwin Van Aken sitting in a chair. Mrs. Scott did not look in the window. After rapping at the front door again and getting no response they went to the kitchen door, that also was locked, and knocking brought no response from Edwin Van Aken. Mrs. Van Aken also called to her husband but got no answer and they went back to the front door and rang the bell 7 or 8 times, when Van Aken opened the door.

When we got in my sister said to Van Aken: "What did you bolt the door for? You have locked me out before but you can't do it again," and then Van Aken swore at his wife and at the witness. What he said was unprintable.

It was fifteen minutes before Van Aken opened the door to let them in the house.

Questioned as to the exact words Van Aken used in addressing his wife on that occasion, Mrs. Scott repeated them, adding, "That was one of the pet names he called her," (his wife).

Mr. Brinnier objected to the statement about the pet names Van Aken called his wife and they were stricken from the record.

Carried Money in Stocking.

Questioned by the district attorney as to whether the murdered woman carried any money about her while in the house, Mrs. Scott replied, "Yes;" and when asked where, said, "In her stocking."

It will be remembered that former witnesses testified that when the body was examined by them the stockings were unloosed and pulled down below the knee.

Asked by the district attorney if she had had a conversation with Van Aken the evening of the murder, she replied not much of a conversation. She asked Van Aken the day of the murder if he had changed his clothes that morning and he replied that he had not.

A Queer Hiding Place.

Van Aken had asked her, she said, as to whether she had her sister's bank books, and she replied she had not seen them, but would hunt for them. Two bank books were finally found hanging in a bag containing shoes back of a curtain in the bedroom where the body was found and turned them over to Van Aken.

Dead Woman Had $1,000.

It was brought out that the bank books were to the credit of the murdered woman. One showed deposits of over $1,000 and the other $30.

The books were later produced by Mr. Brinnier and placed in evidence.

Still Another Bank Book.

Mrs. Scott, continuing her story, said that when she gave the two bank books to Edwin Van Aken he had told her that his wife had brought the other bank book to him wrapped in a towel and cried.

This other bank book is believed to be the book covering a joint bank account in the name of Van Aken and his wife. This bank book is expected to be produced in court on Tuesday by Van Aken's counsel.

All He Done Was Swear.

"You don't like Eddie Van Aken, do you?" asked Mr. Brinnier, arising from his seat to cross examine Mrs. Scott.

"He did not treat men good," she replied.

Mr. Brinnier attempted to have the witness say that Van Aken had told her that he did not want her at his house, but Mrs. Scott said he had never told her, but all he did was to swear at "both of us," meaning the dead woman and herself.

She was asked by Mr. Brinnier as to why she did not leave and go home when she found that Van Aken swore at her, and she replied that she did not know Van Aken wanted her to go home and she stayed because her sister asked her to.

After the murder she stayed a week at the Van Aken home and assisted in getting the meals and doing the housework.

Owned Home Jointly.

County Clerk William C. DeWitt was called to testify to a deed filed in the county clerk's office. The deed was dated August 1, 1910, and was made by Christopher Parcell and wife and conveyed the Van Aken home to Edwin Van Aken and Carrie B. Van Aken, his wife.

A record of the deed was placed in evidence. The consideration stated in the deed was the nominal one of one dollar.

District Attorney Cunningham announced that unless something unforeseen occurred that practically concluded his case against Van Aken and that Van Aken's counsel had agreed to produce the bank book showing the joint account of Van Aken and his wife, in court on Tuesday morning.

Court then took a recess until this morning.

Napkin Rings.

But for the napkin rings. They are relics of a departed age, reminders of the era of the Saturday night bath, the old folks' concerts and the painted panoramas of the Nile. They abide now in out of the way corners, tarnished and forgotten, bands of old silver, often affectionately inscribed at the command of givers long since turned to dust. They are the sort of reminders of a gentler but less fastidious generation that we do not like to part with except for some good reason and have no desire to keep. The serial napkin went long ago. To the melting pot, by all means, with the rings, and that they may melt up into millions of dollars' worth of silver is our sincere wish.—New York Times.

The Cigarmakers' Luxury.

Besides the privilege of having newspapers and novels read to him while he works, the Cuban cigarmaker demands another indulgence—that of cheering his labors with cigars provided by the firm. Every morning six high grade wrappers are handed to him for his own use, and in these he folds as much as he likes of the tobacco supplied him for the day's work. The cigars thus made and consumed are said to cost the Havana tobacco industry a sum of close on $250,000 a year. The head of one great firm once declared that he would willingly make over his factory and plantations to his employees if in return they undertook to give him the cigars they rolled for themselves.

The Slav Race.

History has contributed to separate the two masses of Slavs. The Mongol yoke for two centuries introduced Asiatic customs among the Russian Slavs. The Turkish yoke for many centuries and down to our own times influenced the character and customs of the Bulgars and Serbs. On the other hand, the Latin Slavs followed the historical evolutions of the occident—they were with Godfrey de Bouillon at the crusades, they were touched with the flame of the renaissance, they have had their part in the development of modern thought.—Literary Digest.

The Loon a Good Diver.

As a diver the loon excels, and naturally, for it is his sole means of livelihood. Not only is he marvelously quick, but he can remain under water for a seemingly endless time. In swimming under water he uses both wings and feet and can go for several hundred yards in this fashion. The loon, like many other waterfowl, sleeps on the water with his head tucked under his wing.

ROBERT S. LANSING'S POST NOW MOST IMPORTANT.

Robert S. Lansing, Counsello to the State Department, and one of the foremost authorities on International Law in the world. Mr. Lansing has been most conspicuous in the work of framing President Wilson's second note to Germany on the submarine warfare being waged by the Kaiser's navy. He has been in constant consultation with the Chief Executive, discussing the proper choice of phraseology and terms included in the second note, and attended the entire session of the Cabinet meeting, in which the President's advisors confined their attention solely to the German controversy. This letter is an extremely unusual occurence, as none but the Cabinet officers and the President attend such conferences except when some momentous question is under consideration.

SUBMARINES SINK FIVE LARGE SHIPS

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

London, June 8.—Activity by German submarines on a large scale continues in the waters all around the British Isles and today reports were received of the sinking of five large vessels, three of which were Norwegian. Of the others, one was a Belgian ship and the other a Russian vessel. The victims were as follows:

Norwegian ship Glittertind, 717 tons, sunk in North Sea off Shields while en route to Hartlepool from Sweden with cargo of timber. All members of crew saved.

Norwegian bark Superb, 1,515 tons, sunk in Atlantic ocean off Fastnet, Ireland, while en route to Queenstown from Buenos Ayres with cargo of grain. All crew saved.

Norwegian steamship Trudvang, 1,040 tons, sunk in St. George's channel off Welsh coast. All crew saved.

Russian schooner Adolf, sunk in North Sea off Scotch coast with loss of two members of crew.

Belgian steamship Menapier, 1,425 tons, sunk in North Sea off English coast with loss of seventeen lives

His Finger Crushed.

John, better known as Hans Fischer, had his hand painfully injured while unloading lumber on the Central Hudson Steamboat dock this afternoon. His hand was caught between two heavy pieces of timber and one finger crushed.

Origin of "Editor."

One of the most interesting verbal or philological trails that scholars now are following into the past for light on origins is that which has the word "editor" stamped upon it. Yale's authority on evolution of English speech, Professor Lounsbury, could find no earlier use of the term as applied to the chief writer and director of a periodica than in 1768, but there is evidence in the superb collection of British and American newspapers owned by the Antiquarian society, Worcester, Mass., that it was so used in 1761. The alleged use of the title in the Boston Newsletter of 1728 proves, on examination of the file in the Boston public library, to be inaccurate. Undoubtedly Isaiah Thomas, in 1773, spoke of himself as editor of the Royal American Magazine. The interesting point to be noted, while the hunters are busy on the trail, is that, relatively speaking, "editor" is a new word in journalism. "Printer" and "publisher" preceded it.—Christian Science Monitor.

Way of the Bluejay.

The bluejay—Cyanocitta cristan—a purely an American bird. He is about twelve inches long, is light purplish blue above and graying below. The collar and frontlet are black and the wings and tail ultramarine, barred, the outer tail feathers being tipped with white. What a graceful, beautiful bird this is, impertinent and noisy, his raucous scream followed by a chortle that sounds much like a mocking "Ha, ha, ha, oh, my." He is accused of robbing the farmer's corn crib, of sucking the eggs of other birds and even of tearing to pieces their young. The sportsman as he goes through the woods, gun in hand, thoroughly hates the jay, which is a kind of game warden, sounding an alarm to the other birds as their enemy approaches. Naturalists have placed him in the crow family despite his beautiful plumage, but his manners and his morals are more like those of the sparrow hawk.—Indianapolis News.

YOU cannot buy a managing-director's brains for office boys' wages. You can't have advs. with the wallop written for a fiddler's pence. "Nothing for nothing" is a universal medium of exchange. FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, June 8.—War order stocks, including the various industrial and copper shares were in brisk demand this morning while the old time standard issues were neglected and fluctuated within a narrow range. Aggressive buying again made Bethlehem Steel prominent in the initial dealing, the price rising 6½ points, passing the previous high record of 159. Baldwin Locomotive rose 1⅜ to 52½. Distillers Securities rose ¾ to 23⅛ and Crucible Steel ¾ to 31¼. American Smelting was the most active of the copper group, that stock rising 1½ to 75⅝. Union Pacific dropped ¼ at the start to 127⅜ and then moved up to 27¾. Reading advanced ½ to 145⅜ and fractional gains were made in St. Paul and Erie. Canadian Pacific started ¼ lower at 50, followed by an advance to 151½. Steel Common receded ¼ at the outset to 59, then moved up to 59⅞.

Noon.—Recessions ranging from fractions to around two points in some of the leading issues were noted in the late forenoon. U. S. Steel was about the only issue making an advance, that stock rising a point to sixty on talk of large unfilled orders. Bethlehem Steel which sold as high as 162 receded to 160, this stock being five points above last night's close. Westinghouse Electric dropped a point to 96¼ and fractional recessions were noted in Crucible Steel, American Locomotive, Pressed Steel Car, Studebaker and General Motors. The copper issues were fractionally lower, Amalgamated Copper dropping ¼ to 75 and Anaconda and Chino Copper were off ¼, the latter selling at 47. Money loaning at 1¾ per cent.

The stock market closed nervous. Governments unchanged, other bonds steady.

Opal Is Deadly Omen.

The superstition has come down the ages that to find an opal is a deadly omen. It means that you have picked up someone else's misfortune. "Better let the stone lie, no matter what its value may be," is an old adage.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, June 8.—The Giants are a 15 to 1 shot for the 1915 pennant—just that and nothing more. It seems that nothing but a miracle can win for them now.

The Giants have just one real pitcher—Tesreau. And no ball club ever won a pennant with less than three top notch pitchers. Mathewson is about through. The brain of the "old master" is as crafty as of yore, but the old arm refuses to obey the dictates of that brain. And the opposition has batted the feeble shoots and slants to all portions of the lot on practically every start Matty has made this year.

Marquard is erratic. One day he pitches a great game; the next day he performs like a busn leaguer. Perritt was a winning twirler with the Cardinals but he hasn't touched the .500 mark with the Giants. Stroud is showing up nicely but he can't be depended upon to win two-thirds of his games. Schupp and Schauer haven't shown anything.

And these men constitute the Giants' defense, Tesreau, a marvelous pitcher, the fast-slipping Matty, the erratic Marquard, the in-and-out Perritt, and the unreliable Stroud, Schupp and Schauer.

Offensively the Giants do not show up much better. On some days they look like the greatest outfit of sluggers in existence; on others they act like a bunch of blind men. They hit in streaks; and no streak-hitting club ever won the pennant.

Some wonderfully optimistic Giant rooters still see a chance for the pennant. They point to the work of the Braves last year. They argue that the Giants can do what the Brves did. But how different is the situation.

Last year the Braves had no one to beat but the Giants. The New York outfit overshadowed every other club in the league up to July 4. Every other club was of the second division order. But this year there are at least four clubs that seem as powerful now as the Giants did in 1914.

The Cubs, Phillies, Braves and Pirates—and even the Brooklyn Dodgers—can give the Giants a mighty battle. No team other than the Reds will stack up as a pie counter proposition for the 1915 Giants, because even the Cardinals are dangerous. The Giants, in an attempt to climb from the bottom to the top of the National League heap would find the climbing at least 300 per cent harder than the Braves did last year. And, furthermore, the Giants haven't the power that the Braves had. The Braves were aided and abetted in their achievement by the most remarkable pitching feats the baseball world ever has known. Three twirlers—James, Rudolph and Tyler—pitcher in rotation week after week and pitched as no trio of men ever pitched before.

McGraw hasn't any trio to work as Stallings had. He hasn't got a Maranville nor an Evers. His men aren't imbued withthe same fighting spirit as were Stallings's men and, most important of all, he hasn't got the Stallings luck.

Good playing and marvelous pitching were mighty factors but the mightiest of all was luck A dozen times the "breaks" saved the Braves from defeat and gave them victory. Day after day the God of Good Fortune smiled on the Braves—and victory rested upon them.

A pennant contending team must be well rounded—and the Giants of 1915 are not. Their pitching department is the main weakness but the catching department is not anything that should be envied. The team as a whole is prone to bobbling in pinches. "Bone" plays are frequent, and worst of all a hard luck jinx has been pursuing the McGraw outfit since the season began. And it's still pursuing. But the Giants won't finish in the cellar. They probably will climb out of the rut soon and leap over frames of the Reds, Cardinals and Dodgers. They may go a notch or two further, depending very largely upon what the Cubs, Phillies, Braves and Pirates do from now on. They won't finish first unless all the players on the other clubs become afflicted with beri-beri, spavin, seasickness and hokus-pokus.

YALE QUARRY AGAIN.

Another Twist in the Litigation of New York City.

A demurrer interposed by the city of New York to the taxpayer's action brought by Joseph T. Mulligan against the New York board of water supply, Comptroller Prendergast, Corporation Counsel Polk and other city officials, was argued before Judge Hasbrouck on Saturday by William McM. Speer on behalf of the city officials and in support of the demurrer, and by Major R. Dulany Whiting, attorney for Mr. Mulligan, and Thomas Gilleran, attorney for Jerome H. Buck, in opposition.

The case was heard at the May special term, when application was made on behalf of Mr. Mulligan for an injunction restraining the city from taking further proceedings insofar as they affected Parcel No. 7, known as the Yale quarry, on the ground that the city has exceeded its authority in attempting to acquire that parcel, which was not needed for water supply purposes, and that it had not included the Yale quarry in its maps or plans submitted to the state water supply commission.

Judge Hasbrouck recently handed down a decision denying the motion for an injunction and held that the city under the power of eminent domain conferred on it by the legislature was the proper judge of whether the land was needed for water supply purposes and the could would not invade or interfere with that function, and that under a decision of the appellate division of the Second department detailed maps showing the property by metes and bounds had not been necessary to be filed with the state water supply commission when permission for acquiring land in Ulster county had been sought.

Mr. Gilleran, counsel for Mr. Buck, enlarged upon the brief argument made by Major Whiting. He said the Arietta street case, on which Judge Hasbrouck's recent decision was based, differed from the present case in the facts on which a decision had been founded. In the Arietta street case, the city had found it impractical to use certain property after it had been acquired and thereupon had sought to acquire additional property by filing an additional acquisition map. The court in that case had held that approval of the general plan by the state water supply commission had been sufficient, but in the present case the water supply act limited the city to acquisition of land shown on the may accompanying the Burr-Herring-Freeman report, on which the confines of Parcel No. 7 was not shown. The city could not therefore exceed the limits fixed by the Burr-Herring-Freeman map; it might take less land than was indicated on that map but it could not take more. In demurring to the complaint, the city admitted the contention of the plaintiff Mulligan, but he did not know what the city engineers, in the subtle way, might attempt to show.

"Are engineers any more subtle than lawyers?" asked Judge Hasbrouck.

"Assuredly," said Mr. Gilleran. "We are dealing with truth in a more aggressive way."

Mr. Speer, in reply, said the demurrer admitted the facts alleged by the plaintiff but a demurrer in no case admitted the statements of law set forth by a plaintiff or the conclusions to be drawn from the facts. The complaint in the present action stated that part of Parcel 7 was included in the Burr-Herring-Freeman map, but not all of it; that the city took part of the property but not all. The appellate division, by its affirmance of Judge Hasbrouck's order in this case in another proceeding, had held that it was not a matter for the state water supply commission to say whether the city of New York should acquire the whole, or a half, or a third of any particular property; it was not claimed by the city that Parcel 7 had been shown on the Burr-Herring-Freeman map by metes and bounds, and the appellate division had held that showing the property by much metes and bounds was not necessary.

Judge Hasbrouck took the papers and reserved decision.
